Hull Boom Is Launched; Taft Cedes Maryland

Dewey Coup Claimed As Senator Yields; Back Tennesseean, Hoey Urges Carolina

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

A Southern boom for the Democratic Presidential nomination of Secretary of State Cordell Hull was launched last night as New York District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey's Republican Presidential band-wagon rumbled off with Maryland's 16 votes.

The unannounced Hull, who has remained aloof from campaign hurly burly, received the unqualified indorsement of Clyde R. Hoey, North Carolina's favorite son governor, who predicted nomination of Hull with President Roosevelt's full support.

Maryland's 16 votes for Dewey were virtually assured when Senator Taft, of Ohio, declined to accept the New Yorker's challenge for a Maryland primary showdown May 6 because "the cards would be stacked from the beginning." Taft cited opposition to his candidacy from leaders of both warring Maryland G. O. P. factions.

158 Votes Claimed for Dewey

Bloodless capture of Maryland's delegation apparently assured the poll-leading Dewey of about 158 delegates immediately in sight from past and prospective primary conquests, without counting scattered strength and band-wagon jumpers, his friends said.

Gov. Hoey's declaration for Hull in Raleigh, N. C., bore all of the earmarks of a rebuke to a recently organized third-term movement in the State, led by a "North Carolina for Roosevelt" organization.

It was the first big plug for the nomination of Hull, who had discouraged his friends from either organizing or campaigning for him in advance of the convention.

Hoey Declines Honor

Hoey, who himself was assured of a complimentary vote as favorite son, urged North Carolina delegates not to vote for him on the first ballot. He said Hull is the one Democrat who can both unite the party and win in November. Until third term activity recently opened in the State it had been assumed North Carolina delegates would vote first for Hoey and then turn to Hull.

It had been reported that the President disapproved of his own name being entered in any Democratic "favorite son" States, but in Washington the third-term movement against Vice President Garner in Texas received fresh encouragement from the shadow of the White House.

Wirtz Texas Bound

After a White House call, Alvin J. Wirtz, Assistant Secretary of the Interior, told reporters he was Texas bound and expected to "put in some licks for the third term." Wirtz declined to say whether he discussed politics with the President or to indicate Mr. Roosevelt's views on the Texas "draft Roosevelt" drive. He said he would go to Texas as an individual rather than a public official.

"I don't think New Dealers in Texas would be willing to call off the third-term movement and give the State to Vice President Garner," said Wirtz. "I think they would be willing to give Garner a complimentary vote and then go for a third

More than 150 of the Nation's leading editors yesterday checked up on two big stories which have eluded their reporters for weeks.

The news executives, here for a two-day convention of the American Society of Newspaper Editors, were given an opportunity to size up third-term possibilities at first hand in an informal press conference with President Roosevelt at the White House last night.

Earlier yesterday members of the society went to the State Department to talk with Undersecretary Sumner Welles, who returned three weeks ago from a survey of the European diplomatic front and disclosed that he ran into some cold weather.

What the editors learned about third-term or European peace prospects will not be published. Both conferences were off the record.

128 Democrats Approve Measure Over Rayburn's Plea

By John B. Oakes.

Despite opposition of the Democratic leadership, a three-to-one majority in the House yesterday passed and sent to the Senate the Walter-Logan bill drastically restricting the power of the Government's administrative agencies.

Widely interpreted as a rebuke to alleged "bureaucrats" in the Government, the measure was rolled through the House by the overwhelming vote of 280 to 97. The Democrats split, with 128 for the bill, to 93—including most of the New Dealers—against it; while the

Rankin to Get Vote on Veterans' Pension Measure

Advocates of pensions for dependents of deceased World War veterans succeeded yesterday in a maneuver to bring to the House floor a bill that would provide such benefits.

Chairman John E. He said he had to resort to the petition because the committee refused to send the bill to the floor.

Commission Arranges Mt. Vernon Highway Zoning Protection

Development of the George Washington Memorial Parkway, zoning protection for the Mount Vernon Memorial Highway, and two housing units of the Alley Dwelling Authority were among the projects furthered by action of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission yesterday.

Ending its two-day monthly meeting, the commission approved contracts for acquisition of 106 lots and small parcels of land between the District and Great Falls, all on the Maryland side, in connection with the memorial parkway.

Adoption of a supplementary agreement with the city of Alexandria was announced, its purpose to coordinate proposed zoning changes along Washington street, which coincides with the Mount Vernon Memorial Highway in Alexandria.

Thomas S. Settle, secretary of the planning body, explained that under the new agreement applications for rezoning of Washington street property will be submitted to the commission before they are acted upon by the Alexandria council.

A subdivision plan for the Alley Dwelling Authority's Alabama avenue housing project was approved, as was a site plan for the group of dwellings which the ADA is building near the Navy Yard.

The Coast Guard's proposal to build a new headquarters and pier at Seventh street and Maine avenue southwest also was approved by the commission. Coordinated with plans

A Tragedy of Errors

Street Duplication Misleads Rescuers, Man Dies of Gas

Edward S. Barnsley, 49, died yesterday apparently because of the confusing duplication of street names in Takoma Park and Silver Spring, adjoining Maryland suburbs.

Barnsley, who lived at 325 Houston street, Silver Spring, might have been saved from death by gas asphyxiation had not help for him been delayed a half-hour while rescuers hunted for his house number on a street in Takoma Park.

Charles E. Deffinbaugh, chief of the Silver Spring Volunteer Fire Department, which finally reached the Barnsley home, blamed the death on the existence of Houston streets in both suburbs.

Mrs. Barnsley found her husband unconscious in the gas-filled kitchen of their home at 4.30 p. m. A neighbor called for help, and the call, through error, was received by the Takoma Park Fire Department. The Takoma firemen sought the Barnsley home, on Houston street, in Takoma Park. Unable to find a number 325 in Takoma, they called the Silver Spring department a few minutes after it had received a call from another neighbor of the Barnsleys.

Mrs. Barnsley was frantic with anxiety and crying repeatedly "Where have you been?" when the Silver Spring department arrived. Firemen tried artificial resuscitation methods on her husband for a half hour before he was pronounced dead by Dr. H. H. Howlett.

Three years ago civic organizations and fire officials of Takoma Park and Silver Spring launched a campaign for renaming their streets. The campaign was intensified in the last few weeks when citizens organizations, at meetings, called upon municipal authorities for action.

$963,797,748 Voted Navy By Senate

Tally, 63 to 4; Measure Gives Funds for 19 New Warships

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

With but four members dissenting, the Senate yesterday passed the record $963,797,478 naval appropriation bill, providing funds for laying down two 45,000-ton battleships and 17 other warships next year.

Climaxing a day replete with naval defense developments, the Senate action came after but four hours' debate, during which expected opposition failed to materialize. The vote was 63 to 4.

Earlier Admiral Harold R. Stark, chief of naval operations, revived efforts to develop the distant Island of Guam, only 1,400 miles from Tokyo, as a naval base, with a declaration that fortification of the island would "stabilize the political situation in the Far East."

Japan's Strength Told

Stark's testimony that Japan has four 43,000-ton battleships nearing completion and perhaps as many as eight others under way was credited as being largely responsible for abandonment of plans by the Senate "little Navy" group to strike out one of the battleships carried in the bill. Senator Adams (Democrat), of Colorado, had announced he would move to drop one of the dreadnaughts.

Pointing out that six battleships now being constructed for the United States are but 35,000 tons, Admiral Stark said the next such craft the Navy will seek may be as large as 52,000 tons. Two 45,000-tonners were appropriated for last year but their keels are not yet laid.

The only votes cast against passage of the bill were by Senators Capper and Reed, of Kansas; Danaher, of Connecticut, Republicans, and Johnson (Democrat), of Colorado.

No Changes Made

No changes were made in the measure on the floor. Committee amendments cutting the total $1,981,960 under the amount approved by the House and $123,514,099 below President Roosevelt's budget estimates were adopted and the bill was then sent back for House action on these modifications.

Principal addition made by the Senate was an extra $10,000,000 in contractual authority for ordering 119 planes for the aircraft carrier Hornet, now building.

Other naval developments of the day included:

Roosevelt Bound South, Prepared For Quick Return

President Roosevelt, leaving last night for a vacation at Warm Springs, Ga., was reported to have told a friend that if another country is invaded while he is away he will return to the Capital immediately.

His statement recalled a similar remark by him 12 months ago when he left Warm Springs. At that time he told a throng at the railroad station:

"I'll be back in the fall if we don't have a war."

The President told his press conference yesterday that his 10-day vacation trip would be governed by developments abroad and that his special train would be kept in readiness for a quick return if an emergency arises.

D.A.R. Hears Pan America Trade Plea

Dr. Grady Calls For Expansion Of Commerce With Republics

By Lucia Giddens.
Post Staff Writer

In a colorful Pan American program last night the Daughters of the American Revolution hailed the friendship among the 21 American republics, after having heard warning on undesirable foreign "isms" from other directions.

"It is as important to get trade barriers between the Americas reduced as it is to keep the territorial boundaries clear of menacing and provocative military fortifications," declared Dr. Henry F. Grady, Assistant Secretary of State, in an address on "The Good Neighbor Policy for the Americas" at the evening session of the D. A. R. Congress.

Dr. Grady said that expansion of commerce with the American republics and preservation of recent trade gains depend on such "a solid basis" as that provided by the trade agreements program. He decried the clamor of "this special interest lobby or that" which protests against reciprocity.

Senor Dr. Hector David Castro, Minister from El Salvador, on the same program, said that American republics "have shown to the rest of the world that they are ready to defend the integrity of their territories and their status as free and independent countries either individually or by concerted action, as the case may require."

At an earlier session, J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, said that Communist leaders have issued orders for plotters to "smear" the FBI. Hoover defended the FBI against accusations of "OGPU" and "Gestapo" tactics.

The D. A. R.'s Pan American program last night, in honor of the fiftieth anniversary of the Pan American Union, opened with a procession of flags in Constitution Hall. Pages bore the flags of the United States and the separate States, followed by those of the 21 American republics. The United States Navy Band Orchestra played a march.

Allies to Buy 1,500 Warplanes From U. S. Plants

By the Associated Press

Great Britain and France contracted tentatively yesterday to purchase more than 1,500 speedy American warplanes expected to cost at least $120,000,000.

Reports of large-scale buying were confirmed by Arthur B. Purvis, head of the Anglo-French purchasing mission, who said "huge quantities" were involved. Although he mentioned no figures, aviation experts in close touch with the negotiations said at least 1,500 planes were covered by the tentative contracts.

The initial contracts were for Curtiss fighting planes and for Douglas attack bombers, which Congress has been told were superior to any that have seen action thus far in the European war.

C.I.O. Wins Voting At General Motors

Detroit, April 18 (AP).—The climax of a year-long dispute over bargaining in General Motors Corporation plants gave the United Automobile Workers (C. I. O.) a decisive victory tonight over their chief rivals, the United Automobile Workers (A. F. L.).

The complete tabulation of results tonight showed:

U. A. W.-C. I. O. bargaining rights in 49 plants, including the largest units in the far-flung General Motors system, but challenged votes in one small Detroit plant might reduce the figure to 48.

English Continue Landing Troops, Make Contact With Norwegians

By Robert P. Post

London, April 18.—British troops are continuing to land in Norway, according to a communique issued tonight from the war office. "Contact has been made with the Norwegian forces and operations are proceeding," said the official communique.

And that is all that is said tonight about the British army which is known to have landed at several points on the Norwegian coast.

Whether British forces have met German is still unknown, largely because any revelation of the position of British forces might serve to help the German intelligence.

Heard Torpedoes Hit

The submarine Spearfish returned to port today with the crew lining the rail with a gesture of "thumbs up," which is becoming a traditional British sign for military success. It was the Spearfish which claims a successful attack on the Admiral Scheer. According to the crew she was thought to be a destroyer when first sighted, but later was seen to be a ship of a larger class. The submarine dived as soon as she had fired her torpedoes but heard them strike.

Meanwhile, the admiralty and the air force issued information about the continuing air operations against the German forces again concentrated at Stavanger Airfield. It is suggested here that these attacks are designed primarily to keep the Germans from using Stavanger as an effective base. Whenever the Germans get a chance to refill the holes left after British attacks, new attacks are made with damage, according to the accounts, not only to the airfield but to the planes on it.

Nazi Transport Sunk

The admiralty today announced the fleet air arm sank one transport off Bergen. A submarine was attacked on the surface and one hit was obtained, the communique said.

On Wednesday the fleet air arm took on enemy planes which attacked British ships returning from the bombardment of Stavanger. One Heinkel and one Dornier flying boat were shot down while two more Heinkels and another Dornier were damaged, it was said. All British aircraft returned safely.

Damaged Cruiser Returns

The same communique said a cruiser which had been damaged by German bombs on the way home had now arrived at her base.

Royal Air Force attacks on Stavanger took place Wednesday and Thursday nights. High and low flying attacks were delivered by a strong force of bombers, the air ministry said. Hits were observed on runways and on transport planes parked about the air field, it was said. The attack lasted over an hour and the German fighters defended. In addition to damage done to aircraft on the ground, two twin-engined enemy planes are believed to have been shot down.

Meanwhile, according to the communique, a general reconnaissance was carried out and attacks were made on a submarine and a supply ship. From these operations three

Warspite Bombed Off Norway Coast, Nazi Aides Hear

Berlin, April 18.—There was a report current in naval circles tonight, which up to a late hour had not been officially confirmed, that the latest victim of German bombers operating from their new Norwegian bases was the 30,000-ton British battleship Warspite.

The Warspite is believed to have been directly hit by a 2,000-pound bomb and put out of commission.

The attack is thought to have taken place somewhere off the northern coast of Norway.

Navy's Goats to Die for U. S. In Tests of Oxygen Bombs

Goats, which of all animals suffer most like men, will be used by the United States Army soon in tests of the lethal power of a new explosive. Use of the animals was approved yesterday by a joint Congressional committee. The tests probably will be held April 30.

The experiments, deferred several weeks ago by protests from the American Humane Society, were finally decided upon at an executive session of a special House-Senate committee studying possible military use of a new liquid oxygen explosive developed by Lester B. Barlow, Baltimore inventor.

Senator Morris Sheppard (Democrat), of Texas, chairman of the Senate Military Affairs Committee and a member of the joint body, said the sacrifice of goats to the science of war would be carried out at the Army's proving ground at Aberdeen, Md., unless barred under Maryland law.

A Maryland law forbids experiments on animals except when "justified" by the public interest. The publishers of an Illinois pet magazine filed suit at Towson, Md., 10 days ago for an injunction restraining Barlow from carrying out his test. A hearing was set for April 23.

Barlow said that 60 to 70 goats to be provided by the Navy, would be used for each experiment. He said the animals would be tethered at distances up to 1,000 feet from points at which the explosive will be detonated.

Only canvas bags will be used to cover the explosive, Barlow said, and for this reason goats will be killed by detonation waves rather than by flying steel fragments.

Struggle Begins

By Otto D. Tolischus

Stockholm, April 18.—Starting ostensibly as a struggle over Swedish iron ore, the war in Norway is rapidly developing into a vast rival flanking movement by both Germany and the Allies, in which the Allied navies are pitted against the German air force in a race against time that may well decide the issue of the war.

In some respects, this race recalls the German and Allied race for the channel ports following the battle of the Marne in the last war, except that the distances are vastly greater.

Nazi-British Skirmish Reported

So far, the British forces in and near Norway have apparently concentrated on bombing and shelling the airports of Stavanger, Bergen and Trondheim to prevent their use against England and the British fleet, while organizing their landing forces. But according to all appearances the first real battle between British-Norwegian and German forces is developing around Trondheim, where both sides are believed to be concentrating.

The Germans have rushed mechanized units and artillery to Trondheim and according to Swedish press reports have "landed" them there, which would mean that they must have come by boat under the nose of the British fleet. At the same time, the Germans are also extending their sway out of Trondheim, not only eastward in the direction of Storlien, but also southeastward along the Trondheim-Oslo railroad at Roeros and northward toward Namsos where the British have landed an expeditionary force.

Fortress Holds Out

The Germans who have reached Roeros are presumably trying to establish contact along the Glommen Valley with German forces pressing northward from Hamar. Small Norwegian forces are resisting at both points. The Germans proceeding northward have reached Steinkjer, with which communications were suddenly broken off today and where a first skirmish between Germans and British is now supposed to be under way. The Germans have also rushed by plane "a death battalion" of 400 men to a point 6 miles south of Namsos.

Just how strong the German forces in that region now are is difficult to estimate. Most of them are

Roosevelt Asks Relief Fund For 8 Months

President Urges Authority to Spend Money as Needed

President Roosevelt requested Congress yesterday to approve the 1941 WPA budgte estimate of approximately $975,000,000, and grant the Administration permission to spend it all in eight months if conditions warrant.

While there was strong indication that the President's recommendations would ultimately be approved, his proposals met immediate opposition in some quarters on grounds of "inadequacy" and in others on grounds that the appropriation should be on a yearly basis.

In a letter to Speaker Bankhead, the President said there was no information at the present time to justify a reduction in the 1940 WPA program, which called for an expenditure of $1,500,000,000 for the 12 months.

Estimates Are Explained

Pointing out that the 1941 budget estimate would require a one-third cut in the 1940 program, the President suggested that "the most logical" action for Congress now would be to appropriate the budget item, but to allow it to be spent in the first eight months of the fiscal year beginning July 1, if it is "absolutely necessary to avoid suffering and hardship."

Representative Woodrum, acting chairman of the subcommittee handling relief, commented that the President's suggestion amounted to a request for "an eight-month appropriation" and "would mean a $1,500,000,000 relief bill for the entire year." Expressing disappointment that the original budget estimate was not thought sufficient for the full 12 months, Woodrum was noncommittal when asked if his committee would endorse the President's recommendation.

Representative Taber, of New York, ranking Republican on the committee, declared, however, that "if there were honest management of relief, expenditure could be cut $250,000,000 below the budget estimate." Representative Fish (Republican), of New York, demanded retention of the usual provision that the funds be spent over a full 12-month period.

"Is this another campaign slush fund?" he asked.

Marcantonio Wants More

On the other hand, Representative Marcantonio (American Labor), of New York, complained that the President's request was "inadequate" and "evasive." Representative Coffee (Democrat), of Washington, protested the "inadequacy" of the estimate, but added that the eight-month proviso represents "a great victory for the unemployed."

After a conference with the President, David Lasser, president of the Workers Alliance, declared the President's decision "is one that we cannot accept." Ralph Hetzel, jr., C.I.O. unemployment director, announced that the President's figures are "still not enough."

At his press conference yesterday, President Roosevelt said that no one could predict how much employment there will be next year, but economists think there will be as much as there is now.

Any discrimination against independent theaters also would be banned.

The proposals have been sent to Thurman Arnold, chief antitrust prosecutor of the Justice Department, and to leading Hollywood producers, but have not been acted on.

The Gallup Poll

Illinois, Wisconsin and Nebraska Show G. O. P. Trend; Scene of Recent Primaries

By Dr. George Gallup,

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

Princeton, N. J., April 18.—Much argument and confusion have arisen in political circles over the precise meaning of the primary results in Wisconsin, Nebraska and Illinois. Each party can find something in the figures to bolster its own cause.

As an index of national sentiment primaries suffer from the fact that the turnout of voters is usually small, and that the elections are often uncontested, as was the case in the G. O. P. presidential primary in Illinois where Thomas E. Dewey ran alone.

GALLUP

To find the true sentiment in any State it is necessary to consult a cross-section of all voters—those who take the trouble to vote in a primary and those who do not. The American Institute of Public Opinion has just completed intensive surveys of Wisconsin, Illinois and Nebraska.

All Three Lean G. O. P.

The results indicate that all three of these States are leaning Republican at the present time.

The swing of sentiment away from the Democrats since 1936 has been particularly sharp in Illinois and Wisconsin. Carried by the Democrats with huge majorities in the Presidential election four years ago, these two States now show a Democratic defection of from 14 to 23 percentage points. Present sentiment there is, of course, subject to change as the Presidential campaign develops. But the situation today is shown by the Institute surveys as follows:

"Which party would you like to see win the Presidential election this year?"

WISCONSIN VOTERS
Favoring Republicans	55%
ILLINOIS VOTERS
Favoring Republicans	55%
NEBRASKA VOTERS

Marked Shift Since 1936

The extent of shift in sentiment since 1936 may be seen from the following comparison. The Democrats carried Nebraska in the Presidential election four years ago with 58 per cent of the major party vote; today the Democratic percentage in the State is 49, judging by the poll. Illinois went Democratic by 59 per cent in 1936; today that party's strength is 45 per cent. Wisconsin was 68 per cent Democratic in 1936, and only 45 per cent today.

With several months still remaining before the nominating conventions, today's results do not constitute any sort of forecast. They are merely an April preview of party strength. At the present time it seems clear that, in the three large States covered by today's study, the Republicans have gained enormously since 1936 and find themselves in an advantageous position today. Whether they can hold this advantage will be shown in future soundings by the Institute.

Sunday: The Gallup Poll will report party strength in each of the 48 States—the first complete preview of the 1940 election.

Hoover Urges U. S. to Break With Russia

Assails Recognition As a 'Political, Moral Mistake'

By the Associated Press

New York, April 18.—Herbert Hoover today labeled the United States' recognition of Russia "a gigantic political and moral mistake," and suggested that "the moral equities would be at least reasserted if we withdrew our Ambassador and left the technical representation of a charge d'affaires."

"Would it not establish self-respect; would it not contribute to re-establish moral standards in a sorry world, if we took some action?" the former President said in an article called "Russian Misadventure" in the current issue of Collier's Weekly.

Hoover conceded that "errors in foreign policies often cannot be fully corrected."

Something "Can Be Done"

"But," he wrote, "because errors are made is no sign that nothing can be done about it. When we see that the consequences result in continued disintegration of decent standards in the world and at home, we should at least reassert our position on these standards."

On November 16, 1933, when President Roosevelt recognized Soviet Russia, Hoover said, "the same conditions still prevailed . . . as when President Wilson denied recognition and they had been confirmed by 14 years of bloody terror . . . and the constant effort of Moscow to destroy democratic government everywhere."

American business was "brought to to support recognition by huge promises of new business," he declared, and followed this with the assertion that in the six years from recognition to Russia's invasion of Poland "we sold a total of about $200,000,000 worth of goods to 160,000,000 people in Russia."

"That is less than 7 per cent of what we sold 10,000,000 people in Canada in the same period," Hoover wrote. "It is a curious commentary that in the six years prior to the recognition we sold Russia almost $500,000,000, or more than twice as much."

Since recognition, too, he added, we have bought over $300,000,000 in gold from Russia at $35 an ounce, ignoring the fact that "a large part of this gold is produced by the bleeding fingers" of Siberian exiles, and that "it helps the Soviet finance the destruction of small nations."

Since the Polish invasion, he continued, American sales of goods to Russia have increased 300 per cent.

"That represents a large addition of gasoline, copper, alloys, etc., to aid in the subjugation of the liberties of the Finns and the Poles or other people," he said.

Saposs Asserts He Never Was A Communist

Writings 'Distorted' In Smith Inquiry, Says NLRB Economist

Dr. David J. Saposs, the Labor Board's chief economist, whose writings and political views have been under Congressional scrutiny, declared yesterday that he was neither a Communist nor an advocate of violent political action.

Saposs' statement was considered in a letter to Representatives Murdock (Democrat), of Utah, and Healey (Democrat), of Massachusetts, whose minority report on the Smith committee inquiry into the Labor Board included a qualified disapproval of Saposs as a Federal jobholder.

The minority report said:

"If the excerpts from his writings which were read into the record are a fair example of his views, we disapprove as strongly as our colleagues of a person entertaining such views holding an important position in the Government."

Holds Writings Distorted

Saposs told Haley and Murdock that his writings, viewed in excerpt form, had been "distorted and misconstrued in order to attribute to me an economic philoshophy which disqualifies me for my present position."

Reiterating denials he made after testimony offered the Dies Committee on Un-American Activities, Saposs said:

"I am not a Communist, have never been a Communist, and am strongly opposed to all forms of dictatorship and totalitarism, Fascist or Communist.

"As professional labor economist and a student of the labor movement, my chief interest has always been the objective outlines of my subject matter and not participation in organized political activity."

Tells of Changed Policy

While a student at the University of Wisconsin he was a Socialist, he said, and later affiliated with the Conference for Progressive Labor Action. He said he withdrew from the conference when it changed policy "in the direction of Communist philosophy."

The Smith committee majority proposed elimination of the Labor Board's economic research division, headed by Saposs, and the House eliminated funds for the salaries of division employes.

Text of President's Message on Relief

Following is the text of the President's message to Congress yesterday on the relief problem:

In submitting to the Congress my budget for the fiscal year 1941, I included an item for relief and work relief which provided the amount of approximately $975,000,000 for administrative expenses and the cost of project operation of the Works Projects Administration. This represented a reduction of approximately one-third from the amount which was made available for these purposes in the current fiscal year, and if used for the 12 months of the fiscal year 1941 will provide an average employment of only about 1,330,000.

In the message transmitting this budget, I commented upon the item for relief and work relief by saying: "If conditions fail to meet our hopes, additional funds may be necessary."

The preparation of the budget was completed in December, 1939, at which time industrial activity in the United States was at a very high level. I regret to inform you that the hopes which I entertained at that time and which were based on the industrial outlook then prevailing, have not been sufficiently realized, and that it is therefore in my judgment now necessary to adopt measures for dealing with the situation which exists today and which may be quite confidently predicted for the next few months.

The industrial production index of the Federal Reserve Board for December stood at 128, an all-time high. In January it declined to 119 and in February to 109. The preliminary index for the month of March is 105. It is hoped that it will not go lower than this.

It is extremely difficult to predict at this time the volume of employment in private industry that will be provided throughout the whole fiscal year 1941. The present indications are that leaving out any violent fluctuations which may occur due to events abroad, private employment in the fiscal year 1941 will be as high as the fiscal year 1940.

There is certainly at the present time no information available to justify a reduction in the program of the Work Projects Administration below that which has been carried on in the current fiscal year with an appropriation of approximately $1,500,000,000.

In my judgment the most logical action that the Congress could take at this time would be to appropriate the budget item for the Work Projects Administration but to lodge discretionary authority in me or in the commissioner of Work Projects to expend this amount in the first eight months of the fiscal year, on condition that unemployment conditions in the country are such as to require such expenditure within that period. I can assure you that if this discretionary authority is provided in the Appropriation Act, the appropriation will not be expended within the eight months unless it is absolutely necessary to avoid suffering and hardship.

If the appropriation is made with the provision which I have just described, the incoming Congress will have the period from January 3 to March 1, 1941, to deal with the question of the need of providing funds for the last four months of the fiscal year, if such need is then apparent. It may also be necessary, in connection with the consideration of this question, at that time, to give attention to the related question as to whether taxation will be necessary in order to provide the needed funds.

I would like to make it clear that I am asking only for authority to exercise a limited discretion in the expenditure of the appropriation, and that I am not asking that the principle of apportionment which is written into the current Appropriation Act be abandoned. I believe it is entirely proper and advisable for the Congress to include the apportionment principle in the act, but this principle can just as logically be extended over the eight months period as over the entire fiscal year.

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

George Isemann, Sportsman, Dies; Popularized Bowling

George Lincoln Isemann, 50, who was instrumental in popularizing duckpin bowling and one of the best-known sportsmen in the East, died yesterday in New Haven, Conn., where he was directing the current championships of the National Duckpin Bowling Congress.

A native Washingtonian, Mr. Isemann was the son of George and Minnie Isemann. His father, well known in music circles here, taught organ and piano at Georgetown University. He studied under Franz Liszt, famous composer, at Weimar, Germany.

Mr. Isemann had been executive secretary of the bowling congress since its organization in 1927. He was a former president of the Washington City Duckpin Association after which other bowling organizations in the East were modeled.

Besides bowling in which he was a top performer with the Harmony Lodge team in the Masonic League and other local quints, he was active in several other sports.

A well known amateur baseball player, he at onetime held the world scholastic record for the 220-yard dash while a student at Central High School.

Interested in politics, Mr. Isemann was a strong Garner supporter, and wrote the slogan, "Guaranteed Prosperity with Garner, the Great American from the South," which the Vice President used in his 1932 campaign.

Before devoting himself to bowling congress duties 12 years ago, Mr. Isemann for five years was General Motors representative. He also at one time was engaged in the real estate business and the automobile business.

During the war, Mr. Isemann served as a lieutenant with the Army here.

A member of the American Legion, Mr. Isemann was an active Mason, Elk and Shriner. He made his home at University Park, Md.

Mrs. Merceda Isemann, the bowling leader's wife, went by train to New Haven yesterday when notified of her husband's death. Other survivors are his mother, a daughter, Doris, and an uncle, Henry Xander.

His body will be returned here to Hines funeral home today. Burial will be in Arlington.

Chains Helped Broaden Markets. House Group Told

By the Associated Press

Two labor leaders and representatives of a number of vegetable and fruit growers told a House subcommittee yesterday that chain stores had helped to broaden markets for goods and distribute surpluses.

The witnesses testified during a Ways and Means subcommittee hearing, each in opposition to the bill by Representative Patman (Democrat), Texas, for Federal taxes on chain stores.

The labor spokesman, Patrick E. Gorman, said the principle of the bill might eventually be used to tax labor organizations out of existence. Gorman is president of the Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen of North America, an A. F. of L. affiliate.

"Whether we in the labor movement admit it or not," he said, "the largest operator of the chain unit system in the world is organized

Kennedy Delays D. C. Merger Bill

The emasculated Kennedy bill for reorganizing the District government will not reach the House floor before May 13, Representative Ambrose Kennedy (Democrat), of Maryland, said yesterday as he abandoned his efforts to get it on the calendar by next Monday.

Kennedy said he will poll his subcommittee today in order to be able to report the measure to the full District Committee on Monday. This will be too late, however, to get the legislation considered at the District day session later in the day.

U. S. Extends Graft Probe To 3 States

Michigan, Arkansas, Georgia Scrutinized; Inquiry Spreading

By the Associated Press

New Orleans, April 18.—The man who headed a Federal "clean-up" of Louisiana's politics confirmed today that similar inquiries are well under way in Michigan, Georgia and Arkansas, and indicated Uncle Sam's graft-hunt would widen rapidly.

O. John Rogge, Assistant Attorney General in charge of criminal prosecution, declined direct information on his moves, but there were strong indications that reported political corruption in Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Florida was next on the list for Federal scrutiny.

The tall prosecutor's investigations are widely credited with paving the way for destruction of Huey Long's political machine in Louisiana and the defeat of Gov. Earl K. Long by Sam Jones, reform candidate. He is here now to confer with assistants on pending trials.

Agents Increased

Asked in an interview why Michigan, Georgia and Arkansas were under inquiry now, Rogge made no direct answer, but said activity there "does not imply that all the other States are without scandal."

The new probes, said Rogge, will parallel the Louisiana inquiries, including reported corruption in public office, mail fraud, and other violations of Federal statutes. He said he was increasing the number of his agents in the three States.

"About two months ago while I was here in New Orleans," Rogge said, "I announced I was going to begin an investigation in another State. But I did not mention its name.

"Immediately my office was flooded with letters from many States, reporting instances of alleged political corruption among many other offenses. The persons writing said "I don't know whether you mean our State but, if you don't, you ought to. Here's a sample of what's happening here."

"So I am investigating and I am going to run these cases out and whatever else I can find."

"We Investigate Complaints"

Commenting that he had been criticized for "persecuting" Republicans in Michigan and that some persons had claimed his Georgia investigations were an attempt to discredit Senator George (Democrat), of Georgia, Rogge said:

"We investigate complaints, not people, and where there is a violation of Federal statutes we prosecute, no matter who the offenders are."

Officer Reports $7 Theft On Battleship Wyoming

Norfolk, Va., April 18 (AP).—The robbery of several strong boxes in the warrant officer's quarters aboard the United States battleship Wyoming was reported today.

Capt. Donald F. Patterson, commanding officer, said the boxes contained nothing except about $7 in petty cash and attributed the stealing only to a "petty thief." The robbery took place Sunday.

The Wyoming is now being used as a training ship and no documents of great naval value are being kept aboard, the commander said.

Finnish Reds Fought Soviet, Helsinki Legislator Says Here

Finnish Communists, almost to a man, fought against Russia in the recent war there, Aukusti Kuusisto, member of the Finnish Parliament from Helsinki, told The Post last night.

KUUSISTO

"They knew," he said, "what Russia was like."

Kuusisto, who arrived in the United States Tuesday, is the guest here of J. Salenko, 4530 Lowell street northwest, secretary of the Finnish Legation. He left Finland April 3 on a mission to "tell Finnish-Americans of the situation and get their help. We don't believe they can leave our people to starve."

Back home, he said, his people face the doubly difficult task of rebuilding their cities devastated by war from the air and of absorbing nearly 500,000 evacuees from the area taken over by Russia under the peace treaty. Practically all the people of that area, he said, have chosen to leave their homes, their jobs, their farms and begin life anew rather than live under Soviet rule.

The homes they are rebuilding and the factories they are rushing to replace to care for jobless evacuees, they paradoxically saw destroyed with fierce joy.

"They praised God for air raids," Kuusisto explained, "because they kept that many pilots from the fighting front."

As for the future, attenuated Finland "has got faith; we believe by fighting we have saved Finland for the Finnish people and their form of government."

But "the twentieth century is not favorable for small democracies," he added sadly. Before the war, Finland was already doing all the things people and nations believe will bring peace and preserve peace but they failed us. Now we don't know what we must do except be prepared always to defend ourselves."

Mrs. Harriman Cleared in Lottery

Santa Fe, N. M., April 18 (AP).—A Federal District Court jury last night aquitted Mrs. Oliver Harriman, of New York, of lottery conspiracy charges, and found four codefendants guilty. The jury had deliberated three and a half hours.

The four with Mrs. Harriman were charged with conspiring to transport tickets in interstate commerce in the promotion of a New Mexico sweepstakes for a hospital for crippled children.

Nazis Relying On Air Power To Whip British

In Stavanger Conflict Over Fleet Proven In Stavanger Conict

By Russell Hill.

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

Berlin, April 18.—Fighting of the last week, and particularly today's and yesterday's encounters between German bombing planes and British naval forces bombarding Stavanger, have led official Nazi opinion to the conclusion that the answer has at last been found to the vital question:

Is the airplane definitely superior to the battleship and the cruiser?

The answer given is a positive "Yes."

Should this verdict prove correct, at least three important facts will be established that cannot help but have an important influence on the outcome of this war and even on future history.

Has Better Chance

Germany will, because of its Norwegian air bases, be able to drive off British naval attacks on Norway, and hold the country. Germany will have a much better chance than has, until now, been conceded her, to carry through successful air attacks on England.

Finally, countries with powerful air arms will enjoy a better strategic position than great naval powers, and many countries will be forced to change the emphasis of their defense programs away from naval construction in the direction of the building of a powerful air fleet.

The Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung predicts a great military revolution, declaring that the test between airplanes and warships is "an event of the same comprehensive magnitude as the medieval conflict between mercenary foot soldiers and feudal knights when musket shots pierced the coats of mail and spelled the military, social and political doom of the era of kni. thood."

Would Gain Du.. Aid

The German newspaper points a more timely moral by saying that this military test is also "an event of great significance for the Western powers, whose press is just now handling Germany's ally, Italy, as though a destructive direct hit from the air might not fall on warships in other seas."

A clear victory of planes over ships would be particularly welcome to the German forces right now because it would detract from the importance of German naval losses during the last few days. It is hazy—in Berlin at least—exactly how great these losses were, but German half admissions, added to the reports of travelers from Scandinavia, indicate that they were very large in proportion to the size of the Reich's fleet.

Ohio River Tonnage Records Sharp Rise

Cincinnati, April 18 (AP).—Booming industrial activity sent Ohio River tonnage to a record 25,955,345 for 1939, the United States Division Engineers' Office reported today.

Nazi Treachery Blamed for Swift Path in Norway

The initial successes of Germany's advance against Norway were based on Nazi treachery and not in Norwegian treason, the Norwegian Legation said yesterday.

A formal statement, issued after the legation received a cable from the legation in Stockholm, Sweden, suggested that "sensational rumors of treason and sabotage must be received with the greatest reservation." It attributed orders holding Norwegian forces from action against the invaders as the work of Nazi agents in Norway.

Concerning the false orders to Norwegian troops, the legation's statement said that "great damage was also caused by a false order instructing the Norwegian troops not to shoot in order to prevent provocations, but wait until the Germans attacked. Certain detachments were thereby placed in a position where they could not defend themselves before it was too late."

The legation contended that the Germans at one point protected their operations behind hostages.

Bremen Sunk, 15,000 Aboard, British Hear

Norwegian Sailor Says Huge Liner Was Lost In Norway Attack

London, April 18.—Exchange Telegraph, British news agency, today quoted a Norwegian survivor of the torpedoed British steamer Stancliffe as saying the German liner Bremen had sunk off Norway with 15,000 troops.

The seaman, named Rydningen, was saved after the Stancliffe was torpedoed off the north Scottish coast last Friday.

The agency quoted Rydningen as saying that a telegram announcing safe arrival at a Norwegian port had been found in the Bremen captain's pocket and that it was sent to Germany by Norwegian authorities.

(German authorities in Berlin last week denied earlier reports that the Bremen had been sunk early in the occupation of Denmark and Norway. Today authorized German sources said they had no information on the liner, but that the latest report sounds like "the same old swindle which has been frequently revived by the British.")

Rydningen was one of 16 survivors landed today by a vessel which rescued them after they spent three days in an open boat. The bodies of six of their companions were in the boat.

The Stancliffe, 4,500-ton steamer, was torpedoed 40 miles off the north coast of Scotland last Friday. The captain and 13 others were killed or swept overboard. The remaining 24 launched a lifeboat; seven died at sea and one soon after the landing.

Robert Evans, the second engineer, said the German submarine which torpedoed the Stancliffe came alongside the lifeboat after she was launched and, covering her with a machine-gun, took Rydningen aboard.

Stoyadinovitch Link To Axis Sought In 7-Hour Hunt

By C. L. Sulzberger
Copyright by New York Times

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, April 18.—Milan Stoyadinovitch, former prime minister and foreign minister of Yugoslavia, has been interned in his house under police guard following a seven-hour search of his papers, which terminated this morning.

No charge has yet been made against him, but the search warrant instructed police to look for illegal papers.

Three suitcases full of his private documents have been taken to the ministry of the interior. These include telegrams from and correspondence with Adolf Hitler, Premier Mussolini, Count Ciano, the Italian foreign minister; Air Minister Hermann Goering, George Kioseivanoff, former premier and foreign minister of Bulgaria, and Premier George Tatarescu of Rumania. It is the claim of Stoyadinovitch that all of these comprise messages dating from the period between 1936 and 1939, when he was in office, and that the majority are formal congratulatory notes.

In addition to these, the police seized some personal letters to Stovadingvitch from Prince Regent Paul. These were marked "highly confidential" and were labeled "to be kept by Stoyadinovitch."

The former prime minister was known, while he was in office, as a strong friend of Italy and Germany. Many people talk of him as a puppet ruler in case Yugoslavia should ever be swallowed by the axis. Private sources claim the reason for the search was that he was suspected of working in secret with axis agents.

When told of these rumors, Stoyadinovitch said:

"There is no reason of any sort to justify this conduct. That will deny anything that may be involved."

Roosevelt Backs Hull on Indies

come involved in the European war, Japan was informed, the government of the East Indies would be able to carry on in defending itself and in maintaining order

Another dispatch from Batavia, Java, said the Fatherland Club, an organization of businessmen in the Netherlands Indies, had sent a telegram to the governor general of the Indies asking that "subversive activities" by Nazis be curbed.

From Tokyo came word that Hull's statement was greeted as coinciding with Japan's own wishes for maintenance of the status quo in the Pacific. A report on the statement was made to the privy council by Foreign Minister Hachiro Arita.

The threat that the war may be extended to the Pacific gave Wall Street an attack of "war jitters." During the final trading hour stock prices dropped sharply, led by rubber shares. Australian bonds sank for losses up to 10 points, while Patino, the Bolivian tin stock, firmed fractionally to a new high.

Some unofficial sources familiar with the "Middle East" believed an attempt by Japan to invade the Dutch islands under the pretense of "protecting" them would cause the local Dutch governments to resist, and therefore would spread the war conflagration to the Pacific.

The islands might be able to hold off Japan for a period of time, these sources believed, although others thought Nippon's superior "military muscles" would make quick work of the Dutch defenders.

Asked about the Hull statement at his press conference yesterday, the President expressed the hope that the status quo would be maintained in the Pacific in the interest of peace.

He declared he thought Hull's statement covered the situation adequately.

Hull's warning was freely indorsed by Republicans as well as Democrats in Congress, although there were scattered demands for amplification. Senator Austin, Vermont, Republican whip, said in approving the statement:

"We cannot remain positively and entirely silent in view of the swiftly changing scenes."

Representative Fish (Republican), New York, demanded to know whether the Monroe Doctrine was being extended to the Dutch East Indies. Senator Bone (Democrat), Washington, declared that if the statement implied war with Japan, "we ought to know about it."

Japan has indicated she might attempt to establish a protectorate over the Netherlands Indies if Holland should become involved in the European war.

Hull's statement was interpreted as pointing to Administration concern over the possible invasion of Holland by Germany.

Some unofficial circles believed it possible that, if Japan should try to seize the Dutch colonial empire, the United States would move its Pacific fleet nearer that region.

Retaliatory measures in the form of penalties against Japanese imports or shipping undoubtedly would be considered, it is said. Congress might enact legislation imposing an embargo on shipments to Japan of materials essential to the prosecution of war, it was pointed out.

Some experts explained that, if Japan moved into the Netherlands Indies and was able to stay there, she might obtain important oil resources, provided the well were not put out of commission in the meantime.

This would weaken the effect of a stoppage of the all-important flow of war supplies from this country to Japan, since oil is one of the main commodities which Japan relies on getting from the United States. Other important ones are scrap iron and machine tools, neither of which she will find in the Netherlands Indies.

Rome Communique Stresses Nazi Military Experts' Visit

Announcement From Highest Source Says Talks With Berlin Commission Follow Agreement Made in 1938

Copyright by New York Times

Lisbon, April 18.—Italian shipping companies have informed their agencies here they must not accept as passengers any but Italian subjects. Many foreign passengers disembarked from Italian ships at Lisbon today.

By Herbert L. Matthews
Copyright by New York Times

Rome, April 18.—On official communique was issued this afternoon admitting and emphasizing the fact that German military commissions are in Italy.

It was given out by the official Stefani Agency without any indication of what branch of the government issued it, so it can be taken as coming from the highest source of all.

It coincides with increased tension over Balkan affairs and new indications that Italy, as well as Yugoslavia, is taking a friendlier interest in Russia than heretofore.

"Exchanges of military commissions composed of military and technical experts of the various arms are taking place between Italy and Germany," the communique reads. "Some of these commissions have already arrived in Rome. Their visit is part of a general program under way since 1938, whose scope is to carry out constant contacts between the armed forces of the two countries."

Like everything else which is happening in Italy these days, there is something puzzling about the move. The fact that it is issued now, at the height of the pro-German, anti-Allies campaign, shows a determination to blazon to the world not only the strength of the political axis but the military alliance with Germany.

At the same time, if Italy was really determined to go to war on the side of Germany, the military arrangements would have been kept secret. The Italians have not only advertised the existence of the negotiations; they have belittled them by placing them in the framework of the 1938 axis.

Paris Senate Backs Reynaud War Policies

Premier Wins Cheers Of Members After 3-Day Secret Session

By P. J. Philip.
Copyright by New York Times

Paris, April 18.—French Premier Paul Reynaud and his cabinet emerged today from a three-day secret session of the Senate in an admittedly firmer position and with warm support.

No vote was taken, but when the Senate was opened to the public and press the premier's speech of appreciation of the manner in which the debate had been conducted was cheered by all members standing, with an enthusiasm which was intended to convey that he had fully satisfied all his critics and had their entire confidence.

This three-day debate has been of a technical rather than a political character. It was called to hear and consider reports of the army, navy and air commissions on what had been done and what had not been done toward winning the war.

All the ministers concerned replied for their departments, and Premier Reynaud, in an hour-and-a-half-speech today, summed up all that had been said and indicated what course he intended to follow.

Ten senators who had tabled interpellations consented to their withdrawal, and the general opinion expressed among the senators was that the Reynaud government has now established itself firmly in favor with the upper house.

Wage-Hour Law's Retail Meaning Is Clarified

The Wage-Hour Administration said yesterday that it would not seek to apply the wage-hour law to any retail establishment in which "50 per cent or more of the dollar value of total sales are retail sales."

The yardstick was laid down for the benefit of the wage-hour field force in determining whether a commercial establishment is exempt from the law as a retailer. Field inspectors were told that "retail sales" means "sales to individual consumers."

Transients Invited To Observe Passover

Transients and wayfarers without family connections were invited yesterday to observe the Jewish Passover with the Hebrew Travelers Sheltering Society, 407 Massachusetts avenue northwest.

Observances will be held Monday and Tuesday. A. L. Schiller, president, also announced the society is in need of men's clothing—shirts, shoes, suits, etc.—for distribution among lonesome travelers.

New Group Maps Program to Keep U. S. Out of War

Adopting a nine-point peace program, a new organization was born last night dedicated to extend every effort in the direction of keeping the United States out of war.

The group was formed from a nucleus of 100 persons representing various local peace committees which met at the Y. W. C. A., and tentatively called itself the Washington Peace Council.

Elected temporary chairman was Howard Ennes, of the Washington Youth Council. Charlotte Young, of the Office and Professional Workers' Union, Local 27, of the C. I. O., was named secretary-treasurer. Four vice chairmen elected were Mrs. Dorothy Strange, Hudson Wells, Myrl Crowder and Worden McDonald.

Germans Drag 11-Inch Guns Into Oslo Area

Falling British Plane Killed Civilian, Stavanger Reports

By Bjorn Bunkholdt
Associated Press Staff Writer

Oslo, April 18.—The German army of occupation today dragged in heavy guns, some of 11-inch caliber, to strengthen its south coast defenses and German reinforcements poured into this Norwegian capital.

Townspeople piled sandbags about cellar entrances and nailed heavy planks over shop windows.

While the municipal administration declared today that 90 per cent of the workers here were back at their jobs, it was estimated 700 persons still were missing after last week's alarm of an expected battle with the British fleet.

Reports from Stavanger said a British bombing plane shot down over the city destroyed nine houses and damaged 20 as it fell, killing one woman and injuring four civilians severely.

A reliable account of the occupation of Stavanger reaching here told how 120 German troops armed with one machine gun apiece were dropped by parachute on the airport.

The Norwegians put up a fight but the commander, realizing the fight was hopeless, stopped the firing. The Germans disarmed the Norwegians.

Blood Bank Funds Still Being Given

Although the Children's Hospital blood bank campaign ended officially a fortnight ago, contributions are still trickling into The Post, which sponsored the drive with Station WJSV and the American Contract Bridge League.

Mrs. Anna Buchetti, president of the Italian Legion Auxiliary, yesterday presented a check for $17, proceeds of a benefit party given by her group. In addition, she turned over three $5 checks, one each from the Garibaldi-Columbia Lodge, Order Sons of Italy; Society Ambasciatrice Maria and the Arte Mestieri-Trinacria.

2,000,000 in Europe's War Zone Need Help

Almost 2,000,000 men, women and children in Finland and in the German-occupied part of Poland are in need of immediate assistance, the Red Cross said yesterday.

War relief operations in Poland, the organization said, must be broadened at once to offset unemployment and general disorganization of industry and agriculture. Conditions there were described by James T. Nicholson, just returned after four months in Europe on Red Cross business.

Nicholson said 1,500,000 Poles, men, women and children, are confronted by a serious shortage of food and clothing, only a third of which relief agencies have been able to counteract.

Population Is Shifting

"During my visits to Warsaw, Cracow and other Polish cities," he said, "I observed a constant shifting of population from one section of the country to another."

He said he was told by German and Polish officials that the Germans and Russians are preparing to move between 2,000,000 and 3,000,000 members of minorities to the government general area.

The plight of Polish industry, whose curtailment of operations has thrown hundreds of thousands out of work, is due, he said, to shortage of raw materials as much as to war dislocations. He said he had seen a prevalence of bartering throughout Poland.

440,000 Finn Evacuees

Finnish relief needs center around 440,000 persons evacuated from the ceded Karelian Isthmus and the hospitalization of 40,000 wounded soldiers, according to information cabled by Red Cross representatives in Helsinki to Chairman Norman H. Davis.

The report said that Russian planes bombed 32 of Finland's 38 principal towns in 1,800 air raids and that casualties filled the hospitals. Sixty-six hospitals were struck by Russian bombs, and many damaged beyond repair, it was said.

"Disorganization of national life has placed so many responsibilities on the able-bodied that the Finnish-Soviet frontier still is covered with the frozen bodies of soldiers of both sides," the cable said.

The following supplies will have to be brought in from outside sources for evacuees until next fall: 20,000 tons of grain, 2,000 tons of rice, 10,000 tons of sugar, 4,000 tons of lard, 2,000 tons of dried fruit, 2,000 tons of fresh fruit and 500 tons of soap.

Young Democrats To Hold Banquet

Young Democrats of the District of Columbia will hold their Jefferson Day banquet tomorrow night at 7:30 o'clock in the Willard Hotel, coinciding with similar dinners in cities throughout the country.

In addition to President Roosevelt's Nation-wide broadcast, which will be heard at the local banquet, an address will be made by Attorney General Robert H. Jackson. Senator Josh Lee (Democrat), of Oklahoma, will preside as toastmaster.

Pan American Accord Hailed Before D.A.R.

republics that we shall have to look for the maintenance of those principles of human liberty and for the preservation of those free institutions that today are the proudest heritage of Western civilization."

Mrs. Henry M. Robert, jr., president general of the D. A. R., in her greetings to the Pan American Union, said it is the "world's best present example of the possibilities of the development of good will and harmony in the relationship of nation with nation."

Dr. Grady said further in his address: "The idea persists that we can sell and not buy. We envisage increased markets for our products in the American countries; in fact there are those who confidently expect full compensation there for trade losses in Europe."

Lobby Clamor Cited

He added that "when the Administration seeks to increase our trade with the countries to the South of us in the only practical way that it can be done, through reciprocity, and announces that it proposes to negotiate trade agreements for this purpose, a clamor arises from this special interest lobby or that."

Dr. Grady said that since last September there has been "a substantial increase in our exports to the American republics."

"Trade gains resulting from economic dislocations growing out of the war may not, however, be of an enduring character," he added.

"If our present efforts to bring about closer trade relations with the American republics are to produce lasting benefits, they must be directed toward placing such relations on a solid and permanent basis, such as is provided by the trade agreements program," Dr. Grady said.

Dr. Castro referred to "the beneficial influence that the American republics are able to exercise over the rest of the world in the cause of peace. They have jointly declared their neutrality in the present conflict of Europe, and they are bound to discourage war by placing themselves in that position of serenity which, being impartial, commands the respect of all nations."

The musical program consisted of songs from Brazil, Argentina and Mexico by Federico Jimeno, tenor, native of Colombia, and a group of songs in English by Charlotte Ridley Watkins, soprano.

Golden Jubilee for Each

The program marked the fact that neighboring buildings are headquarters of the D. A. R. and the Pan-American Union, and the fact that both organizations are celebrating their fiftieth aniversary this year.

"Only last week orders emanating from the Communist Party of America demanded national and concerted action against the FBI," Hoover said at yesterday's session of the Congress.

"With fantastic belief in American credulity, these plotters announced that every effort must be made by members of their organization to involve FBI special agents in situations where they might be accused of crimes or improper activities."

Would Bar Communists

At the same session, the D. A. R. Congress adopted a resolution indorsing the principle "that any political party which advocates the overthrow by force" of the United States Government "should not be recognized as a political entity."

The same resolution urged the State legislatures to prohibit such parties on their ballots. In the discussion, the Communist Party was named as the target of the resolution.

Another resolution, adopted yesterday, commended "the achievements" of the Dies Committee on un-American activities and approved Congress' action in continuing its work.

Hoover said that certain accusations against the FBI emanate "directly or indirectly" from anti-American bodies who hope to discredit the FBI. He said that any one who charges that "OGPU" or "Gestapo" methods have been condoned or even considered within the FBI "deliberately purveys a malignant falsehood."

Hoover declared that destructionists are "under instructions to permeate our Army and Navy with proponents of revolution."

He scored "our national apathy toward the subject of crime," which, he said, "represents a condition which is in fact an incubator for the things which are antisocial."

The report from the D. A. R. national defense committee yesterday warned:

"We must defend ourselves against peace propaganda as well as war propaganda. There is a decided peace front attack from subversive influences, with a definite purpose to disband military organizations, such as R. O. T. C., C. M. T. C. and CCC.

"Examine the activities of every organization you are tempted to join. Remember that many are pressure groups that put the screws on and attempt to divert the road of freedom into socialism, internationalism and communism," said the report from this committee, whose chairman is Mrs. Imogen B. Emery.

"Examine also the peace policy of your church groups, for they are being undermined most successfully, all in the name of a new social order."

Sanford Bates, executive director of the Boys Clubs of America, speaking at the afternoon session yesterday, challenged that "the building of boys is the No. 1 construction job in America today."

He said "our opportunity is not to subsidize youth with a government job, not to say there is a substitute for individual enterprise" but to see that united community action provides an environment in which boys can find wholesome outlets for energy.

Officers Are Elected

Results of the election for vice presidents general were announced at the close of the afternoon session, when the new officials were invited to the stage. They will be installed today.

The seven elected to three-year terms were: Mrs. Reuben Edward Knight, Alliance, Nebr., with 1,442 votes; Mrs. William Harrison Hightower, Thomaston, Ga., 1,431; Mrs. Jacob F. Zimmerman, Harvey, Ill., 1,413; Mrs. Eugene N. Davis, Raleigh, N. C., 1,403; Mrs. B. H. Geagley, Lansing, Mich., 1,401; Miss Marion Seelye, Abilene, Kans., 1,386; Mrs. Fred C. Morgan, Saco, Me., 1,349.

Mrs. Wilbur B. Blakeslee, Baltimore, Md., with 1,330 votes, was elected to fill an unexpired term of one year as vice president general.

Mrs. Gerald Livingston Schuyler, Denver, and Mrs. William Henderson Vaught, Point Pleasant, W. Va., were elected honorary vice presidents general. The number of voters in the election was 1,570, it was announced.

Mrs. Samuel James Campbell, chairman of the school committee, announced that nearly $90,000 in cash gifts had been received for D. A. R. school work in the past year. These funds went into scholarships, building, improvements and other expenses.

Editors After the Low-Down On Everything All Over the Lot about the Presidential race that "the journalistic bookmakers know with any degree of certainty."

Sterling in his address opening the convention at the National Press Club, described the American newspaper of 1940 as "a streamlined, air-conditioned, chromium-plated social medium that travels fast."

The Oregon editor ridiculed charges that the American press is a vehicle of propaganda.

"In a group engaged in casual conversation about any public affair," he said, "one is exposed to more varieties of plane and solid propaganda than ever find their way into any newspaper column.

"The market place of propaganda is not the newspaper but the sewing circle," he observed.

The newspapers of the United States performed major services in the last 12 months, Sterling said, in "exposing public wrongs, notably in Kansas City and in New Orleans." In Los Angeles and St. Louis newspapers "are waging battle for press freedom against oppression by the courts," he reported.

An endowed press or publicly owned or controlled press "could not and would not do these worthwhile things," he contended.

Reform Not Its Function

Sterling said the chief function of the press "is not to remake society, nor to reform society, but to report society . . . Our newspaper job is to hold the light and keep the faith, and in so doing let us not take ourselves too seriously."

Tonight the editors will be treated to an off-the-record debate on "The Third Term and Other 1940 Issues." The speakers will be Secretary of the Interior Ickes, Senator Claude Pepper (Democrat), of Florida; Dr. Glenn Frank, chairman of the Republican national program committee, and Wendell Willkie, industrialist who has been mentioned frequently as a possible Republican Presidential nominee.

The debate, whose participants are among the most colorful orators in the country, will be refereed by the sagacious William Allen White, Emporia (Kans.) editor. It will take place at the convention's closing event, a banquet beginning at 7 p. m. at the Willard Hotel. All tickets have been sold and extra tables have been provided. Approximately 350 editors and guests are expected.

Readers Like "Funnies"

At a "Shop Talk Luncheon" in the Willard Hotel yesterday the editors heard five of their colleagues discuss comic strips, syndicated columns and the value of reader interest surveys.

N. F. Maddever, editor of the Niagara Falls Gazette, reported that a series of disturbances followed his paper's loss of certain comic strips. Delegations of indignant school children called at the office, he said, while 400 adult employes of a large industrial plant signed a petition demanding the return of their favorite funnies.

"I think we learned a good deal from the experience," Maddever said.

W. G. Vorpe, Sunday and feature editor of the Cleveland Plain Dealer, commenting on the growth of reader interest polls, said, "The editor who hasn't been surveyed feels about as lonesome as the chap who didn't see 'Gone With the Wind.'"

Questions Value of Surveys

The Cleveland editor questioned the value of many surveys, asserting that he "would rather just leave a certain feature out of the paper to find out what its following is."

Dr. George Gallup, director of the American Institute of Public Opinion, suggested that newspapers maintain their own research departments "to find out what the public thinks of the product."

"Incidentally," he added, "I have conducted surveys for 50 or 100 newspapers and I never found that features were more important than news."

Sidney Jackson, Cleveland attorney, told the morning session of the convention that newspaper management has a vital interest in making the National Labor Relations Act "workable."

Functions and procedure of the NLRB may be modified, he said, but editors should recognize that the board or something like it is here to stay.

Jackson cautioned editors against any levity in dealing with employe organizations or NLRB officials. "It is practically suicidal for you to make a joke about the situation," he said, recalling the "anguish" of newspaper executives on the witness stand trying to explain away facetious remarks.

Entertained by Publisher

"The 'real and earnest' boys are running this show," he said.

Editors and their wives and daughters were entertained after the White House conference last night at the home of Eugene Meyer, publisher of The Washington Post.

"Streamlining Newspapers" will be the theme of a "Shop Talk Breakfast," starting at 8:30 a. m. today in the Willard. At 10:30 a. m. at the Press Club Norman B. Deuel, of the United Press, will speak on "The Correspondent's Job in the Russo-Finnish War."

Rear Admiral John W. Greenslade will give an off-the-record speech on American naval policy at 12:30 p. m. in the Press Club.

Ralph Coghlan, editor of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch editorial page, will be one of the speakers at the session beginning at 2:30 p. m. Now free under $500 bond, Coghlan was found guilty of contempt of court because of two editorials criticizing State Circuit Judge Thomas J. Rowe. His subject is "Contempt Citations Against Newspapers."

Sterling last night issued a statement denying Welles had told the editors Italy might be precipitated into war by Mussolini. Sterling said:

"The report broadcast by a radio commentator tonight, to the effect that Sumner Welles, Undersecretary of State, had said that Italy might be precipitated into war by Premier Mussolini are absolutely unfounded. Nothing of the sort was said by Mr. Welles to the newspaper editors in conference today."

C. A. R. to Open Convention Tomorrow

The National Society of the Children of the American Revolution will open its forty-fifth annual convention tomorrow at Memorial Continental Hall.

Preliminary events today will be a reception at the White House at 2 p. m. for members and a program at Washington Cathedral at 5 p. m. At that time a gift to the Children's Chapel of the Cathedral will be dedicated.

A stunt night program at 8 o'clock tonight in the Epiphany Parish House will have Grahame Smallwood, of the Gov. Thomas Welles Society of the District, as master of ceremonies.

The three-day convention, starting at 9 a. m. tomorrow, will bring a series of reports on activities of the past year. Mrs. John Morrison Kerr, president of the C. A. R., will be in charge of the program. Awards for activities will be made at tomorrow afternoon's session.

Sunday's program will take the convention delegates at 1 p. m. on a pilgrimage to the Old Presbyterian Meeting House in Alexandria and to Mount Vernon at 2 p. m.

Sons of Revolution To Celebrate Tonight

The District Society of the Sons of the American Revolution tonight will celebrate the anniversary of its first meeting April 19, 1890.

The program at 8 p. m. at the Mayflower Hotel will bring an outline of its early history dating from the organization meeting at the home of Admiral D. D. Porter, 1710 H street. Selden M. Ely, senior past president of the society, will give the historical talk tonight.

Walter Reed Building Urged

Chairman May of the House Military Committee yesterday introduced legislation to replace three wooden barracks at Walter Reed Hospital with a $200,000 structure.

"It's criminal negligence to permit such buildings to stand and house men," he said. "They're a dangerous fire hazard. Their roofs leak and they are an eyesore."

The Federal Diary:

Mitchell Asks Right to Handle Grievances

Civil Service Can Settle Complaints, House Group Told

By Edward Ryan
Post Staff Writer

President Harry B. Mitchell, of the Civil Service Commission, said yesterday his organization is equipped to handle employe grievances "better than any new agency" which might be set up in legislation now before the House.

Mitchell, testifying before the House Civil Service Committee on 11 bills to set up an appeals system for Government employes, asked that the commission be given power to handle these cases.

He said that any machinery that might be set up should be "simple and flexible," and suggested that the commission's 5,000 local boards through the country could do the work, "without additional cost."

On a question by Representative Rogers (Republican), of Massachusetts, Mitchell drew a line between appeals and conciliation. His plan he said, would leave final authority for ruling on employe disputes to the commission.

"Then it isn't an appeals system," said Mrs. Rogers. "My feeling is that the employes want an appeals board."

Mitchell said that a conciliation committee had been handling employe disputes within the commission's staff for the past seven years, and "nearly all grievances have been ironed out satisfactorily."

Ismar Baruch, classification chief for the commission, said that an appeals board set up by Congress with authority to order agency heads to reinstate employes would likely be unconstitutional. Reinstating employes, he pointed out, in practice would amount to appointments, and these under the Constitution, are in the hands of the President or department heads.

Representative Ramspeck (Democrat), of Georgia, chairman of the committee, said that yesterday's session closed the open hearings, but additional testimony will be received in writing.

The Indian office, with gentle pride, reports the following:

Under their newest program, Indians are getting a chance to use their old time tribal court ways in handling modern legal disputes. Indians are playing up to the idea with high seriousness.

Lately, however, an Arizona brave, elated at being named a judge, celebrated with heaps of fire water, and set the legal circles of the tribe in an uproar. Then, when he mounted the bench, he took his own case first, sentenced himself to ten days in jail, and resigned.

The legal system, officials think, is saved.

An indirect pay boost for 9,000 employes in Veterans hospitals will start May 1, under an order of Administrator Frank T. Hines.

His order permits employes living outside Veterans' stations, now required to pay $22.50 a month for three meals a day whether eaten or not, to skip two meals and save $15 a month.

About 100 employes of Mount Alto Hospital will benefit from the order, officials said.

Payment for three meals, officials said, has been required under the terms of employe contracts, which carry over from the days when all employes were required to live on the reservation where they worked. The proportion of workers required to live on the reservation has been reduced to 40 per cent, and last July an eight-hour day for attendants was put into effect.

Attendants living on the reservations with average pay around $90 a month have been paying up to $35 a month for room, board and laundry on the reservations. Those living outside, many with families, have still paid the compulsory $22.50 for three meals.

Summer heat and a five-day week for Government workers were linked in an appeal yesterday from Jacob Baker, president of the United Federal Workers. He said that in the Government field service some administrators had set up a five-day week, and he urged that Congress empower local administrators to follow suit. In summer heat, he said, "records will show sharp slumps in production, on Saturday, a half-day for Government workers.

Berlin Claims British Beaten In North War

Reich Reports Ships Sunk or Damaged In Air, Sea Raids

By Louis P. Lochner
Associated Press Staff Writer

Berlin, April 18.—Germany fought doggedly ahead toward the conquest of Norway today in the tenth day of her occupation and claimed new achievements in the air and on the sea against Britain's challenge.

Authorized sources said that as a result of successes along the Norwegian coast they felt justified in declaring:

"If the British think they can establish naval bases in Norway our activity and success the past two days should teach them differently."

Claim Cruiser Sunk

The German high command officially chronicling a claim already published by D. N. B., official news agency, said German warplanes sank one British cruiser yesterday off Norway, badly damaged light and heavy cruisers with four direct hits, bombed one destroyer, and hit one of two Norwegian torpedo-boats north of Arendal.

(British admitted only that a cruiser had been struck, but said she was able to steam back to port.)

Against this the Germans acknowledged only the loss of four planes.

In Norway herself German reports said:

King Haakon VII recognized the Cristensen provisional government for German-occupied areas of his kingdom though calling it merely an administrative committee.

All Forts Taken

German troops have occupied the entire area southeast of Oslo up to the Swedish border, including all forts, three of which were taken by fighting and three by surprise. Fifty officers and 1,000 Norwegian soldiers were captured in the district while others fled into Sweden where they were interned.

A British attempt to land troops in Herjangsfjord, in the region of Narvik, the northern ore-shipping port, was repulsed yesterday. In a drive to the Swedish border, Germans captured Norwegians, among them the commander of the Bardufoss airport northeast of Narvik.

Narvik, according to statements repeated several times during the day, is in German hands.

Trondheim Attack Broken

Authorized sources intimated that it was not British bravery which doomed 10 German destroyers in the port of Narvik last week. Instead the Germans themselves scuttled the ships after firing their last torpedo and last grenade.

British attempts to attack Trondheim, German-held port on the west coast of Norway, from the air yesterday were said by the high command to have been "completely without succes because of timely German defense."

The general staff kept a sharp eye on developments in Sweden to meet with counter-measures any possible signs of British attempts to invade that country.

Travelers headed for Baltic states had difficulty in obtaining permission to purchase transportation because of a ban put on ordinary travel.

A fear that foreign spies in the guise of travelers might discover the nature of Germany's counter-preparations in event of a British design on Sweden was believed to be the reason.

Also in St. Mary's County

Leonardtown, Md., April 18.—Howard Bruce will pay his second visit to St. Marys County tomorrow at 3 p. m. Gov. O'Conor will speak in his behalf. Dr. F. F. Greenwell will preside at the rally and other speakers will include Bruce and State Senator Philip Dorsey.

First Nazi-British Skirmish Reported in Trondheim Battle

said to be Austrians who spent some time there as refugee children during the last war, and still they remember their Norwegian, much to the astonishment of the natives. But that their lines must be very thin is indicated by reports that they must keep hold of the railway because they are not equipped with skis, which are the only possible mode of locomotion in this region at this time.

And it is also indicated that the fortress of Hegra, on the Trondheim-Storlein railroad, although having a garrison of only 100 men and being bombed by German planes night and day, is likewise holding out as a second Norwegian Alcazar.

It is now becoming increasingly evident to foreign observers here that Germany is determined to convert the Norwegian coast, which is broader and nearer to Britain than the "wet triangle" of the German North Sea coast, into a base for an attempt to deal a crushing blow to Great Britain by means of her presumably still superior air force and her U-boats. Great Britain is just as determined to prevent this by driving the Germans away from the coast, leaving it to the Norwegians to dislodge the Germans from the Oslo region, where their presence brings the war to Sweden's frontier and threatens to involve Sweden herself.

Viewed in this light, which corresponds to views expressed in the belligerent countries themselves, the military operations in Norway to which Denmark is merely a bridge for Germany, begin to assume a logic which the first impact of the war's extension to Scandinavia may have obscured.

As the situation stands tonight, Germany controls southeastern Norway inside of the line that runs roughly from Kongsvinger through Hamar and Hoanefoss to Krageroe on the Skaggerak. Inside of that territory there is only one remaining point of Norwegian resistance, the Fort of Fossum, which is well supplied with ammunition and food for a lengthy siege, and where a determined Norwegian force is defying the enemy. This fort is hailed in the Swedish press as the Alcazar of Norway.

Outside of this comparatively small district, the Germans hold Kristiansand, Stavanger, Bergen, Agdenes, Trondheim, Barnas and Narvik, which they no longer control because of an Allied fleet in the harbor, but from which they have not yet been completely dislodged. Moreover, proceeding along the railroad, the Germans have cut the narrow country in two at two points—from Narvik to Bjorntjell and from Trondheim to Storlien.

Hesitancy at Narvik Explained

Narvik, whatever importance it may have possessed in the iron-ore issue, is now a secondary consideration as long as Great Britain controls the harbor, although it may become the crux of Sweden's attitude toward the war when the question of shipping of Swedish ore to Germany via the Baltic becomes acute after the ice melts, which will be in about a month from now. And this may explain the otherwise inexplicable hesitation of the presumably superior landing forces around Narvik.

[The United Press reported from Lulea, Sweden, that British troops have been landed both north and south of the Norwegian west coast port of Bodo. Bodo is 100 miles south of Narvik.

[The same report stated that British landing parties reportedly took the village of Loding at the base of the Saltfjord, on which Bodo is located; the Landegode Islands and the Tinzlor Islands, in the Atlantic off the port, and the tiny port of Valvic just north of Bodo, thus beginning a siege of Bodo and placing troops in position for a possible move north toward Narvik.)

Both Otto Ruge, the commander general of the Norwegian forces, and Martin Tranmael, prominent Norwegian labor leader, have issued appeals to the Norwegian people to continue the fight.

"We were surprised," said Commander Ruge in his appeal, "and there was some confusion at the start. But now we no longer fight alone and our task is to continue fighting until outside help becomes effective." The Germans, he pointed out, are isolated except for their connections by air, and then concluded:

"Hold out and hold together. Then we shall manage it."

Before adjourning until May, the commission also:

der way will be completed four months ahead of the 52-month building schedule. Submarines and destroyers are from two to seven months ahead of schedule as a result of speeding up construction, he added.

Senator Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland, urged adoption of a 25 per cent increase in the Navy during the hearing on a House-approved measure to expand the fleet by 11 per cent. He said the United States "will never catch up" with Britain and Japan without such a boost, adding:

"We're never going to be ready when war comes. We'll sit over in the Senate scared to death when a naval battle starts."

Apparently other attacks also were made on the Norwegian coast.

No Indian Independence

By the Associated Press

London, April 18.—Britain gave a curt "no" today to demands of the Congress Party of India for complete independence.

Sir Hugh O'Neill, parliamentary undersecretary for India, told Commons that if the party carried through its threat of another civil disobedience campaign Britain would employ "full measures" to hold control.

Parliament legalized administration by decree of the seven Indian provinces in which Congress Party ministries have resigned.

Wardha, India, April 18 (AP).—The working committee of the All-India Congress Party today called on party committees "to prepare for" a declaration of a campaign of civil disobedience.

HORACE HEIDT FANS, ATTENTION! Between his afternoon and evening shows at the Earle Theater next Friday Bandmaster Horace Heidt will have a dinner party at the Mayfair. He will be accompanied by his singer, Larry Cotton, and other members of the Heidt "Pot of Gold Show." You can bet your last nickel that Mayfair's Lyle Smith Trio will be around and will play something special-special for famous Maestro Heidt.

EXPLORER'S DANCE DATE. The Cafe Caprice's Freshmen have just set a new long distance record for party engagements. A recent mail brought them a letter from Lawrence Copley Thaw, exploring in Asia. Mr. Thaw wrote that he would be back in the United States in April and wanted the Freshmen to play for his homecoming celebration party.

FLAG SHIP SAILS ON AIR. Nifty a-plenty was the Flag Ship's first broadcast via WRC Wednesday evening. Brooke Johns did the wise-cracking, Penny Ford and Jerry Junkin sang, Sam Korman and his orchestra offered sugary rhythms and the "Masked Marvel" and his goat contributed some handsome bleating.

P. S. Last night's "formal opening" of the Flag Ship was vurra gay with oodles of the town's best people whirling about in new spring outfits.

"BLACKOUT" is the new dance being introduced this week in the Pall Mall Room by the Arthur Murray Dancers. All lights are blacked out every few seconds. When they come back on the dancers are in the oddest positions!

FACES AROUND PLACES. Mrs. Ffoulke Dewey, who is always described by society writers as having "camellia-like skin," dancing to George Duffy's music in Shar-Zad. Also slews of the little D. A. He named that ole warhorse, "South of the Border," as his favorite tune and it was played with great eclat by Milton Davis and the boys . . . Capt. The Two Aileens will head the Shoreham floor show next week. Max Lowe saw this pair of blonde steppers on the Walton Room in Philadelphia six months ago, has been trying to book them ever since.*

NEAT MELODY TRICKS. Robin Hood's Tommy Johnson is doing a swing version of the "Blue Danube" on the electric organ. Very inspiriting. Tommy makes it sound as though the old Blue Danube had burst through all dikes. (Note. There'll be important changes at the Robin Hood about the last of the month) . . . When Evelyn Tyner pianos "When You and I Were Young, Maggie," she gets all of the Neptune Room patrons to seasoning their seafood platters with big salt tears.

HOLD TIGHT, singers! Two bright spots. They are Terry Granville, of Baltimore, who thrilled Lotus customers the other day with a wistful caroling of "Careless," and beautiful Dorcas Channel of Pennsylvania whose finely trained voice rises to high D in unerring and easy flight. P. S.—Speaking of singers, Billie Bailey who was in the Mayflower Lounge all last winter, is now warbling in the Royal Hawaiian Hotel in Honolulu.

TOP O' THE MENU are the marvelous chicken cutlets a la Kieff served at Troika. They're made of chicken breast stuffed with a Russian dressing that includes creamed mushrooms . . . And the delicious onion soup au gratin served in the new Burt's Trans-Lux . . . And the tasty and satisfying anchovy and egg sandwiches that are a special in the Harrington Tavern . . . And the baked sword fish a la creole concocted by the chef of Dick's Grill.

THE "FIVE DANCING DARLINGS" will head the new Casino Royal revue opening next Monday. A trio of harmony singers, the Reeves Sisters and Morris, will also be new . . . The current Casino Royal show is a gay one, with acro-dancer Peggy Carver spinning right on the top of her head at a rate that threatens to wear off her blonde curls, Dick Newell in sharp and diverting lasso tricks and dancers Pickford and Crandall plus the Hollywood Blondes providing picture numbers.

GLEN ECHO CALIFORNIANS. Most of the lads of Paul Kain's Glen Echo Band are Californians. But Jim Fitzpatrick hails from Boston and Harry Cleo, Joe Garbleman and Lonny Wilford are Washington native sons. Harry Faye is the lone Baltimorean.

NIGHTINGALE COLLEGIATES. More and more collegiate patrons are coming to Nightingale says Leader Bill Downer. Not only are the local universities well represented, but delegations of visiting undergradutes usually seem to find their way down the road to Nightingale.

MAYNARD'S is a great place for week-end funning around. Friday and Saturday are regular "party nights" with capacity crowds enjoying entertainment and dancing. On Sundays Maynard's opens at 5 p. m., doesn't close until 2 a. m.

RIVER BEND is going to town again this evening with "Swing Night." Be sure to hear George Stein and his orchestra sound off with their special arrangement of "Runnin' Wild." It's a masterpiece of dizzy rhythm.

'Blitzkrieg' Plot Ready, Dies Charges

Communist Worked Our Plan for 'Proper Hour,' He Asserts

By the Associated Press

Chairman Dies (Democrat), of Texas, declared yesterday that his committe on un-American activities had obtained possession of a written Communist plan to "blitzkrieg the United States at the proper hour."

Dies told newsmen that the plan was obtained from Communist sources and contemplated paralyzing vital industries—like utilities, communications, transport and steel—in addition to navy yards and plane plants.

The chairman added that the blietzkrieg plan would be disclosed at a committee hearing and would show that "when the time is ripe the Communists and Nazis plan to do here what they have done in so many European countries."

Dies declared that Nazi Germany was cooperating with Soviet Russia in the undertaking.

"Just as they had a treasonable plan for Norway," he said, "they have one for the United States. I think they have one for every country."

Swiss Told to Fight Invaders, Beware of Enemy Trickery

60,000 More Called to Colors; Instant Mobilization Ordered if Attacked; Radio, Planes, Town Criers to Spread Word

By the Associated Press

Berne, April 18.—In a proclamation obviously designed to prevent repetition in Switzerland of the hoax-helped invasion of Denmark and Norway, the Swiss government and high command tonight told the people how the entire nation will be mobilized in event of invasion.

The proclamation followed closely on a call from the Federal Council that will put an additional 60,000 militiamen under arms in the next three months. This will bring Switzerland's armed forces close to the half-million mark.

The Swiss were warned to "beware of all radioed reports or tracts placing doubt on the will of the government and the army command to resist," for these "will be only lies of enemy propaganda."

"Our nation will fight to the end with all means in its power against any aggressor, whoever it may be," said the proclamation. It was signed by President Marcel Pilay-Golaz and Commanding Gen. Henri Guisan.

Under the plan outlined by the proclamation, the mere announcement that Switzerland has been invaded will mean automatic general mobilization of all citizens and all national resources.

The news of invasion will be broadcast on all Swiss radios, sent on all telegraph and telephone lines, carried into rural districts by pre-appointed "Paul Reveres," spread through villages and cities by town criers, and dropped in remote areas in the form of pamphlets by army planes.

The proclamation particularly warned soldiers and civilians to watch for enemy parachute troops or the landing of enemy air infantry.

The proclamation made mobilization on the announcement of invasion instantaneous for all men with weapons in their homes who are not already in service.

Until today's call for 60,000 more men, who must join up between May 6 and July 29, Switzerland had between 375,000 and 425,000 troops in the Winkelried Line between Basel and Lake Constance, and in other frontier fortifications.

In addition to issuing its call for new troops, the federal council extended its study of police and security measures. These include keeping a close check on extremist leaders and organizations, especially pro-Nazis who might try to take a leaf from the book of Maj. Vidkun Quisling and other pro-Nazi Norwegian army officers who aided the German invasion of their country.

Bad Luck Trails James Farley

Young James Melvin Farley, of 415 Seventeenth street northeast, thinks fate played a dirty trick on him yesterday by causing him to miss one of those golden opportunities of once in a lifetime.

James, who is unemployed, Wednesday opened an envelope addressed to him by mistake, but intended for Postmaster General James Farley. The Seventeenth street Farley thought this a fine excuse to deliver the letter to the Postmaster General in person and at the same time "plug" for a job.

"That's just my luck," commented the young man yesterday when he was relieved of the letter by a secretary in Farley's office with the bad news that "Mr. Farley is out of town."

House Approves Agency Curb Bill

Republicans plumped solidly for the measure with only two exceptions. Two Progressives voted for the bill, with a Farmer-Laborite and American-Laborite against.

Amendments Defeated

Before the final vote, Majority Leader Rayburn urged the House to return the bill to the Judiciary Committee—the equivalent of killing the measure for the session—but this move was turned down, 273 to 106.

Temper of the House was clearly shown as the majority battered back nearly every one of a succession of amendments designed to exempt "pet" agencies from the provisions of the bill.

And the temper of New Dealers was also clearly indicated by the amendment facetiously presented by Representative Keller (Democrat), of Illinois, who suggested that the title of the measure be changed to read:

"The lawyers' emergency relief bill to end unemployment in the legal profession and for no other purpose."

As it passed the House, the bill requires public hearings for all rules and regulations issued in the future by administrative agencies, and, upon request of anyone "substantially interested," for all rules now in force if they have been in effect less than three years.

Hearings Provided

Once the rules have been issued, they can then be appealed by anyone to the United States Circuit Court for the District. The court can invalidate them if they conflict with the Constitution or a statute, or if the agency exceeded its authority.

In addition to any person who is "aggrieved" by a decision of an officer or employe of an agency is guaranteed a hearing before a special three-man board.

If he is still "aggrieved" by the agency's final decision, he may appeal to the circuit courts.

The bill covers the 100-odd executive departments and agencies with some exceptions such as the State, War, Navy and Justice departments, Federal Reserve Board, Interstate Commerce Commission, Federal lending agencies, Federal Trade Commission, Railroad Retirement Board and National Mediation Board.

Representative Ramspeck (Democrat), of Georgia, attempted to gain exemption for the Civil Service Commission, as well as to provide that the status of Federal employes shall not be affected by the bill. He was turned down, 26 to 70.

Vain efforts were also made to exempt the Securities and Exchange Commission, the National Labor Relations Board and the wage and hour division of the Labor Department.

Indians Defy Census Takers

The census takers and the Papago Indians in Arizona are in a stalemate.

The Indians, according to Indian Bureau officials here, have good-naturedly, but firmly, decided the census questions are none of the Government's business.

Meetings have been held to explain the law through interpreters, but when the possibility of arrests for continued refusal to answer questions was mentioned, one brave replied: "The Government talks big, but does nothing."

Legion Auxiliaries To Hold Forum On Child Welfare

A child welfare forum will be held tonight at 8 o'clock at the United States Chamber of Commerce Building, 1615 H street northwest.

The meeting will be sponsored by the District American Legion Auxiliary and Salon No. 14, Eight and Forty.

Presiding will be Mrs. Betty McCrahon, child welfare chairman of the auxiliary. Speakers will include Mrs. Mary B. McMillin, president of the auxiliary; Dr. C. W. Holmes, assistant to the superintendent of District schools, and Dr. E. Raymond Fenton, of the speakers' bureau of the Medical Society.

Injured Nurse Awarded $20,000

Miss Susan Marie Hughes, 60, trained nurse of 3249 N street northwest, Wednesday won approval of a District Court jury of $20,000 of her claim against Georgetown University, where she fell and broke her hip when attending a patient six years ago.

Miss Hughes testified the injury left her permanently unable to work at her calling, at which she made $1,500 a year, and that her only income was a $32 a month relief check. She blamed her fall on careless opening of a swinging door at the hospital by a student nurse, on October 29, 1934.

Miss Hughes was graduated as a nurse by Georgetown Hospital in 1912. Whether she would recover damages from her alma mater depended upon a ruling to be made by Justice James M. Proctor on the hospital's claim that a charitable institution does not have to pay damages for such accidents.

Attorneys John A. K. Donovan, Emmett Lee Sheehan and Maurice Lanman, jr., represented Miss Hughes. The hospital was defended by Attorney Henry I. Quinn.

Nelson B. Bell About the Showshops

The Theater Guild Has Reached Its Majority

Producing Company Reaches Age of 21; Wanger and United Artists Hard at Work; This, That and the Other About the Theater

THE THEATER GUILD becomes of age today. During the 21 years of its existence it has had its fair share of successes and failures, with the accent rather heavily on the former.

It was on April 19, 1919, that the Theater Guild produced its first play, "Bonds of Interest," at the Garrick Theater, in New York. Since that time it has achieved a deserved reputation as one of the foremost producing organizations in the American theater, with a keener eye to adventurous and inherently worthy undertakings than to hide-bound theatrical precedent. This forward-looking and progressive spirit has been maintained principally through the judicious guidance of Theresa Helburn and Lawrence Langner, the bellwethers of the Guild's executive directors.

BELL

Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne, coming to the National Monday night in Robert E. Sherwood's "There Shall Be No Night," have been associated with the Theater Guild for so long that the mention of one invariably suggests the name of the other. Eddie Dowling is another who, of late months, has allied his interests with those of the Guild and it is the Guild that has brought to the boards the first two full-length plays of William Saroyan, one of the most discussed of modern playwrights.

The Guild has gone far since moving uptown from Washington Square.

For the sake of the record, among the Theater Guild's most recent offerings have been Ernest Hemingway's "The Fifth Column," with Katherine Locke, Franchot Tone and Lenore Ulric; Katharine Hepburn in Philip Barry's "The Philadelphia Story"—which ran a year on Broadway and grossed in excess of $1,000,000—and Saroyan's "The Time of Your Life," in addition, of course, to the Lunts in the new Sherwood drama.

The Guild is not stopping there, however. It has in current preparation "Love's Old Sweet Song," Saroyan's latest work and one of the Eddie Dowling collaborations. The leading roles are to be played by Walter Huston and Jessie Royce Landis. A little farther away is that Eugene O'Neill cycle of plays, tracing the history of an American family from the early part of the last century to today. It is my recollection that there are nine plays in this saga. The Guild purposes to produce them over a series of years. But Mr. O'Neill, who is reported to be getting along nicely with the labor that has occupied him several years now, is insistent that the first play be not produced until he is well along toward the completion of the last. Forecasting dates under these circumstances is a bit difficult.

Is it true that "Red" Skelton, one of Washington's favorite clowns, is coming back to the Earle Theater for two weeks, beginning May 10, after a long tour of duty at the Paramount Theater in New York?

That dynamic young fellow, Walter Wanger, who created no end of stir with his productions of "Blockade," "Algiers" and "Stagecoach," is not asleep at the switch. He now has in production "Foreign Correspondent," based on Vincent Sheean's "Personal History," with Joel McCrea, Laraine Day, Herbert Marshall, Albert Basserman, George Sanders, Robert Benchley, Eduardo Ciannelli and Edmund Gwenn heading the cast, under the direction of Alfred Hitchcock, who made "Rebecca," entering its second week at the Palace. In June, Mr. Wanger will begin turning wheels on "So Gallantly Gleaming," with its locale in the National Capital and the West. For the early fall he has "Dynasty of Death" written on his slate, an adaptation of Taylor Caldwell's novel, with an all-star cast not yet announced.

In the meantime, United Artists is coming along with John Ford's production of "The Long Voyage Home," already in work, with John Wayne, Thomas Mitchell, Ian Hunter, Barry Fitzgerald, Arthur Shields, J. M. Kerrigan and John Qualen featured, under Mr. Ford's own direction. Nice outlook, by and large.

Katharine Cornell and the Playwrights' Company will donate one-fourth of the profits of their Canadian engagements in "No Time for Comedy" to the Canadian Red Cross. These engagements include one week at the Alexandra Theater, Toronto; a Monday one-night stand at the Capitol Theater, Ottawa, and the rest of the week at His Majesty's Theater, Montreal.

Alan Dinehart, Glenda Farrell and Lyle Talbot, all cinema celebs, have moved their "Separate Rooms" from Maxine Elliott's Theater to the Mansfield, in New York, for the sake of larger seating capacity. Nice going.

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, April 18.

CHANCE: Leland Stowe, war correspondent has scored two world-scoops from Norway this week . . . This, however, isn't the first time Stowe has scored such news beats. Some years ago, when he was working in Geneva, Stowe became tired of the day's activities. He invited a friend to lunch with him at a small, unknown place 60 miles outside the city. When they arrived they were brought to a semi-private dining room. Before he returned to Geneva that night, Stowe had scooped the world on the great story of that time. For in the next room, in that quiet, unknown place, were Briand of France and Stresemann of Germany—going over all the details, while Stowe listened, of the treaty which was going to be known as the Locarno Pact.

ENTERPRISE: Stowe covered the war in Spain for the New York Tribune. When Germany invaded Poland last September, he asked his paper for the war-assignment, and was refused. The editor explained that he was too old—that this warfare would be different, and called for younger and more vigorous reporters . . . Stowe, who is prematurely gray, went downstairs to Jack Bleeck's Artists & Writers Club, and borrowed $100 for the train fare to Chicago. He saw Col Frank Knox, of the Chicago Daily News, and was hired. Two days later Stowe returned to New York with Knox's draft for $5,000 in his pocket. He paid the $100 loan, took the next boat to Europe—and now his scoop on the treachery in Norway may win him the Pulitzer Prize.

TRIUMPH: Teddy Hart, the actor, went to Loew's State to be one of the talent judges for Jimmy Walker's Opportunity Hour . . . When all the contestants had completed their routines, Teddy slowly and carefully wrote his decision on a piece of paper given to him . . . "Why did you vote for Dolan?" he was asked later . . . "Because," was Teddy's frank confession, "his was the easiest name to spell."

MISTAKE: At the opening of the pari-mutuels at Jamacia, a group of curious New Yorkers who never had seen the mutuel machines in operation, were taken on a tour of inspection. One of them spoke to an employe working at the $10 window. He pointed to the sponge these men use to moisten their fingers in counting the bills . . . "What's that sponge used for?" the curious one asked . . . "That's what we use to rap on the window," he was told, "when a customer forgets his change."

TIME: William Woodward, chairman of the Jockey Club, gave a dinner a few days ago for some of his colleagues. At these dinners the guests usually are punctual. But Herbert Bayard Swope was late. . . . Jock Whitney, seated next to Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, looked at his watch and said: "It's 8:40 now. Swope's 40 minutes late." . . . "I'll bet he's on the phone," said Vanderbilt . . . "Yes," agreed Whitney, "and I'll bet he's phoning the Governor" . . . Five minutes later Swope arrived, and apologized for being late. "I was on the telephone," he explained. "I spoke to the Governor."

CHATTER: Adelaide Moffett, working on a 25 per cent deal at Armando's netted more than $1,000 for her first week there . . . The refugee proprietors of the successful wiener flaker plan to inaugurate a chain of these Viennese cafes in 12 major cities—each unit to furnish employment to 35 refugees . . . Jonathan Cape, the London publisher, is breaking tradition, and will publish his first detective story.

PRACTICE: Sharkey, the seal working in "Higher and Higher," received rave notices from the drama critics. Its big scene is the one where it crawls behind Jack Haley, and nudges him in the seat . . . Although Sharkey is a veteran vaudevillian, it still must submit to daily practice. And so each night, before the show goes on, its haughty trainer puts the seal through a climbing and ball-balancing routine, turns around for Sharkey to practice the Haley bit, leaps at the touch, and then rewards it with a fish and a cry of "Very good, very good."

Louella O. Parsons'

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, April 18 (INS).—Well, here is a surprise! Rosalind Russell, who hurried back from New York because MGM wanted her for a picture, will go to Warners for the Katharine Cornell role in S. N. Behrman's "No Time for Comedy!" She is to be costarred with Jimmy Stewart, who has the part that Laurence Olivier played on the stage.

LOUELLA PARSONS

Marlene Dietrich, who had been seriously considered for the Behrman play, will probably be given either "The House on the Hill" or another equally important picture.

If Rosalind finishes the Warner assignment in time she will go to Universal to emote in "Hired Wife," with William Seiter directing, and with Brian Aherne costarred.

Hal Roach is toying with the idea of producing "Lysistrata," a Greek play laid in 411 B. C. He is discussing the idea with Rouben Mamoulian, who has a script which manages to be funny without being censorable. The plot might not be bad today for the play which was produced successfully on the stage, shows the Greek women having nothing to do with their husbands when they return from war, thus putting an end to 20 years of warfare. The manuscript of "Lysistrata" was originally discovered by the Byzantine Monks in the twelfth century, and so it is in the public's domain and could be made without paying money for the rights.

Just how Columbia will get by the censors with "The Shanghai Gesture" is a moot question. Irving Starr has bought the motion picture rights to this John Colton play which served as a starring vehicle for both Florence Reed and Mrs. Leslie Carter. Some 14 years ago it was the biggest hit in the theater and the character of Mme. Goddam, played by Miss Reed and Mrs. Carter, was one of the most discussed in theatrical history. Now I hear Katharine Cornell has been invited to bring that role to the screen. Interesting if she'd accept, but I doubt if Kit has changed her mind about the movies.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Dolores Del Rio and Fred Perry dining tete-a-tete at the Victor Hugo and acting as if they enjoyed each other's society; Estelle Taylor, looking not very much older than when she was wed to Jack Dempsey, lunching at the Beverley Derby; the fans giving Bonita Granville and Jackie Cooper a royal reception at the "Two Girl's on Broadway" preview; Max Wilkinson, editor of Colliers, lunching with some of our best Hollywood writing talent at the Beverley Hills Hotel; H. R. Knickerbocker will get many of the film folk at his lecture Friday night. Elsa Maxwell, Jack Warner, the Jule Steins, Gregory Ratoff and Walter Van Pelt listening fascinated to his accounts of the Munich Putsch, which he covered for the Hearst newspapers.

Bette Davis won't have time for that Honolulu jaunt. She starts "The Letter" in a few weeks; Charles Boyer left for New York yesterday and it's my guess he will meet his mother who has been in France; that was June Duprez with Bob Taplinger and Mrs. Orson Welles with Charlie Lederer at the Cafe Lamaze.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, April 18.

The reason our better agents are in the doghouse at Paramount is that one of them played a little game of double crossing. Seems one of their biggest stars was cast in a coming picture taken from a New York play. An ace director was assigned to the picture, but star's agent had another director who wasn't doing anything, and got them to switch directors. Nice deal, if you can get it.

HOPPER

Dick Powell is through with musical clambakes. His dramatic role in "I Want a Divorce" has convinced him he'll never sing again on the screen. He's not the first to do this. John Boles got smart and went dramatic—doubling his income. Alan Jones got an acting chance in "Honeymoon in Bali," which got him Victor Herbert."

ϕ+ϕ

Says Dick, "I'm sorry when they ask me to be mashed between colossal musical numbers with female dervishes in flying terpsichorean formation. I'm not the type."

ϕ+ϕ

It looks as though Jimmy Roosevelt and the brother of Charles Schwab will do their productions together. With three pictures lined up—"Pot of Gold," "The Bat," and John Stahl's next picture, which he'll finance himself.

ϕ+ϕ

Charles Coburn tells me that "Old Lady No. 31" gives him the best chance he's had so far on the screen. He'll play the thirty-first old lady, with Beulah Bondi as his wife, Helen Broderick and Billie Burke making eyes at him. He said, "I've never found myself in such an enviable position before."

ϕ+ϕ

Since her New York and Florida trip, Greta Garbo should add two words to the famous slogan "I want to be alone"—"with millionaires" . . .

ϕ+ϕ

A hot deal is brewing between Georgie Jessel and Warner's. George wants to do a musical with Lois Andrews. And I've got just the story—why not set "Svengali" to music and make it swingtime?

ϕ+ϕ

Florence Rice, daughter of Sportswriter Grantland, has had her story, "Women Champions," accepted and Fox is going to produce. Being a chip off the old block, she should know all about those champions. She's not bad in tennis, golf and swimming herself.

ϕ+ϕ

Charles Rogers has dusted off the Senate set used in "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington" for his next picture, "Senate Page Boy." No, it won't be anything like "Mr. Smith," so Congress needn't get upset in anticipation.

ϕ+ϕ

The gal who leased Designer Omar Kiam's gorgeous home in Bel Air is Dolores del Rio. It's awful secluded.

ϕ+ϕ

Spiking the gossip, there is no parental objection on either side to the approaching marriage of Anita Louise and Buddy Adler.

ϕ+ϕ

"Blondie's" face was red the other day. She drove into a gas station—and the attendant said, "Say, you're a dead ringer for a dame in a comic strip. Let's see! Oh, I know—Toots, in 'Toots and Casper.'"

Army and Navy Night at Circus

Army and Navy Night will be observed tonight at the Wirth indoor circus, which is nearing the end of a week's engagement in Riverside Stadium for the benefit of Children's Hospital.

Boxes have been reserved for Secretary Woodring and Assistant Secretary Compton. A large turnout of Army, Navy and Marine officers is expected.

Last night was civic night. The Saturday and Sunday matinee performances will begin at 2:15, instead of 3 o'clock. A special children's show will be given at 10 a. m. tomorrow.

"Stage Manager"

DENIS CONNELL

as he appears in the Frank Craven role in the current Blackfriars' production of Thornton Wilder's Pulitzer Prize play of "Our Town"

Blackfriars Extend Run Of 'Our Town'

Pulitzer Prize Play By Amateur Group Remains Moving Drama

By Richard L. Coe.

Thornton Wilder's unfailingly moving play, "Our Town," will be given an extra performance this evening by the Blackfriars' Guild, since three previous showings have drawn capacity houses to the St. Paul's Auditorium.

Last night's was the fourth visit of the writer to Mr. Wilder's remarkable play; it was a visit that convinced him all over again that here must be one of the fine plays of the contemporary theater, one that will not fade from our stages and one that cannot gain the amusingly antiquated air that so many "established" war horses exude.

The Blackfriars production was a good one. So effectively did it proceed that it takes its place in our own entirely personal selection of the three best local, nonprofessional achievements of the season. The Civic's "Saint Joan" and Catholic University's "Murder in the Cathedral" are its only superiors.

Denis Connell Scores Again

Sooner or later, of course, Denis Connell would have to play the Stage Manager. Of all local amateur actors he is one of the most likely to explain to an audience just what is going on on that bare stage, the curious simplicity of which so hetghtens the effect of what the philosophical playwright is saying. Hat on his head, occasionally puffing his pipe, actor Connell disappointed no one, played with wry humor and telling effect.

Grover's Corners, N. H., can scarcely be an unknown spot since "Our Town" won the Pulitzer Prize of 1937-38. The Webb and Gibbs families were just two of the New England families of which Mr. Wilder was thinking. Life and death is all very much of a piece he seemed to be saying, in his pleasantly homely fashion. The playwright's observant use of everyday speech becomes the most vital quality in his drama.

An Up-and-Coming Actor

Gordon Gray's George Gibbs reveals him as a performer who should become invaluable to local amateurs. His high school boy actually does grow into the hopeful groom and stunned widower. It is a natural conception of a role whose juvenile qualities might have been most annoying. Natalie Core's Mrs. Gibbs is a sincere portrait and William Draper's editor Webb relishes well the secrets of good timing. Edna Evans, appealing in that stunning third act, is inclined to be too girlishly coy. Edgar L. Kloten's direction wisely accents the simplicity of the play, although one might question his conception of the final scene.

John W. Mulroy, Ted Allison, John J. Wilson, Helen E. Johnson, Dorothy Davidson, Toby Wood, Leon J. Norris, Albert Sigafoose, Gertrude Heagney, Gordon V. Potter, F. Mildred Carroll, Rita McGarry, Edwin Tomlinson, Julian Zier, Carter Dove, Carl Hess, Roy Neuhauser, William Kirby, Denis Hannan, Anna Hunt, Frances Mohan, Leon Norris, Edwin Peterson and Thomas Markham complete the long cast.

Economic Cure Is 'Frankness,' Farley Says

Speaks at Dinner; 'No Office Too High' For Him, Wagner Holds

New York, April 18 (AP).—Postmaster General Farley, Presidential aspirant, declared tonight that a "simple" solution of the national economic problem could be found in harmonious action by leaders of industry, transportation, finance, agriculture and labor.

He suggested that they be brought "together in frank discussion," and that they "submerge their selfishness."

"Let them acquaint each other with their problems," he added. "If they do, and are frank with each other, I am confident a workable plan that will fit in with the liberal economy of the present day can be formulated."

He made this suggestion in a speech at a testimonial dinner in his honor to which about 2,500 Democratic Party leaders and workers, and Secretary Perkins and Attorney General Jackson, had accepted invitation.

Among the most significant of the speeches saluting him was one by Senator Wagner (Democrat), of New York.

"No Office Too High"

"Jim Farley's stature," said the Senator in a prepared address, "is not to be measured by the vast throng here tonight. He has the confidence and effection of the people of America, in North and South, in East and West. He started his career with no resources except his own talents and character. The story of his steady upward climb to national fame and national office embodies in full measure the rich promise of American opportunity.

"He has risen to meet progressively greater tasks with ever-increasing ability, until today no office within the gift of the American people is too high for him to fill with great distinction."

The dinner was intended as a national demonstration to underline the belief of politicians that the Postmaster General could have all, or substantially all, of the New York delegation at the Democratic convention if President Roosevelt did not stand for renomination.

Praises Roosevelt

Farley praised the Roosevelt Administration generally, but said that at the beginning of the President's first term the situation was so "serious" that "laws relating to economic rehabilitation were legislated with a celerity that was as much of a shock to business as it was a surprise to labor," and added:

"That the benefits flowing from this legislation have not been fully harvested is admitted. To achieve its objectives is the most pressing task confronting us today." Farley declared "we stand 100 per cent behind the Roosevelt policy of foreign relations. We want no part of the war in the other hemisphere and we will permit no part of it to come to this hemisphere."

He also advised his hearers to "be liberal but sensible," adding:

"There is a whale of a difference between free thinking and between liberalism and radicalism. Loose thinking and radicalism have no place in America."

He remarked that there were "young men traveling our land today who are magnifying the faults of the immediate past, while at the same time shielding behind a curtain of silence the greater faults of the little more distant past. In metaphor they condemn but suggest no correctional procedure. They speak words of brave import tuneful to the ear but empty of substance."

R. F. Wagner Funeral Will Be Held Today

Funeral services for Richard F. Wagner, 83, Civil War and Indian campaign veteran, will be at the Lee funeral home, Fourth street and Massachusetts avenue northeast, at 2 p. m. today. Burial will be in Congressional Cemetery. Wagner died Tuesday at his residence, 5104 Fulton street northwest, after a year's illness.

term. . . . I think the people of Texas will make up their minds on this situation without word from Washington."

Other developments:

President Roosevelt said he talked about a lot of things but had not discussed candidates with Postmaster General Farley when the two lunched in private on Tuesday. In one quarter close to Farley it was said the luncheon conference was "eminently satisfactory" to the Postmaster General. Farley is privately opposed to a third term unless a crisis affecting this country makes one necessary and is determined to be reckoned with as a candidate or otherwise at the coming convention

Martin Gets Filip

There were reports at the Capitol that Senate Majority Leader Barkley is being seriously considered for permanent chairman of the Democratic convention. At the past two conventions, Barkley has been keynoter. His selection as permanent chairman apparently would bar choice of another Senator as keynoter, as the Senate never fills both posts.

Boosters of House Minority Leader Joe Martin as a "dark horse" Republican possibility said his prospects received a filip from the imminent clash of the Dewey bandwagon with other "stop-Dewey" candidates at the G. O. P. convention. They denied Martin's selection as permanent chairman would prevent his turning over the convention gavel if his name was presented.

Gillette to Weigh Complaints

Chairman Guy M. Gillette of the Senate campaign investigating committee said "two or three" campaign complaints will be laid before his committee today. It was hinted in one quarter that some complaints involved expenditures in recent preferential primaries.

Senator Gillette said he understood the Administration would like to have Secretary of Commerce Hopkins, as well as Secretary of Agriculture Wallace serve as Democratic convention delegates from Iowa.

Belated returns from Wisconsin showed Vice President Garner won three instead of two of Wisconsin's 24 convention delegates in his primary clash there with the President.

Meanwhile, Senator Taft's decision not to enter the Maryland primaries against New York District Attorney Dewey apparently means there will be no contest in that State and Dewey's name will go on the ballot unopposed.

Taft's Statement

"My name will not be entered in the Maryland primaries," said the Taft statement. "A very bitter fight is going on there between two factional organizations of the Republican Party. The Republican Party in Maryland is a minority party. The vote in the Republican primary is light and will be controlled by those organizations. Former Gov. (Harry W.) Nice and Mr. (William F.) Broening, the bosses of both factions, have declared for Mr. Dewey. The national committeeman, former Senator O. E. Weller, and the State chairman, Mr. David Tilghman, have both asked me to stay out to avoid the intensification of present contests. Under the circumstances, in a two weeks' campaign, the cards would be stacked from the beginning. Although a poll we have taken shows no preponderance of sentiment among the Republican voters for Mr. Dewey.

Taft Claims 300 Delegates

"There are 13 primary States, Mr. Dewey has failed to file in 8 of them, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Ohio, South Dakota, Oregon and California. I presume he failed to do so because he found that the Republican organization in those States was opposed to him. I shall stay out of Maryland for the same reason. I had my papers ready to file last Saturday in West Virginia if any other candidate had filed. None did. Mr. Dewey has run his campaign in his own way. I propose to do the same."

Taft backers claim more than 300 delegates, without Maryland's 16. The Dewey people claim that in addition to Maryland's 16, and the 32 due from his lack of opposition in the New Jersey primaries, he will have at least 72 New York delegates at the start, and another 24 from the Wisconsin primaries. The 14 from Nebraska and 57 from Illinois primary victories are not bound, but Nebraska customarily casts a ballot for the preferential winner. In addition they count on a big bandwagon swing.

Hoey Sees Presidential Support

In indorsing Hull for President, Gov. Hoey last night said he recognized that Hull is not a candidate and will not engage in any primary or State contest.

"It is generally conceded," said Hoey, "that if President Roosevelt is a candidate that he will be nominated on the first ballot, and probably without serious opposition. Naturally Secretary Hull will not contest with the President, but on the contrary I have every good reason to believe that President Roosevelt will indicate his preference for his Secretary of State."

The North Carolina for Roosevelt organization at the same time issued a statement that "the State as a whole favors a third term for Mr. Roosevelt."

Of General Concern

The forthright statement issued by Secretary Hull supporting the status quo in the Pacific, with particular reference to the Netherlands Indies, should help to keep Japanese-American relations from deteriorating.

It is no secret that there are elements in Japan which have long cast envious eyes on the Dutch East Indies. Should Hitler invade the Netherlands, there would undoubtedly be strong pressure within Japan to seize these immensely valuable colonies, attempting to justify the step by drawing an Asiatic parallel to the Monroe Doctrine. It does not appear, however, that the Japanese elements favoring such a sweeping extension of the Island Empire are as yet in control.

Reading between the lines of Foreign Minister Arita's recent statement, it is easy to see that Japan has at least been considering the advisability of a Japanese protectorate over the Dutch East Indies, should the war in Europe engulf the Netherlands herself. Yet the Arita statement also indicated that Japan is still of two minds regarding the course she should take in southeastern Asia. It was, perhaps, largely a trial balloon to test out foreign reactions.

Mr. Arita emphasized Japan's deep concern "over any development accompanying the aggravation of the war in Europe that may affect the status quo of the Dutch East Indies." In and of itself this statement is unobjectionable. Nor does Mr. Hull take issue with it. In his indirect reply the Secretary of State merely points to the fact that "any change in the status of the Netherlands Indies would directly affect the interests of many countries," specifying those of the United States.

While Mr. Arita was emphasizing Japan's unquestioned interest, as though that were alone sufficient to justify any course of action Japan might see fit to take, Mr. Hull points out that America's equally valid interest rests on the broad basis of international comity and treaty observance.

Mr. Hull has in no way accused the Tokyo government of planning any aggressive action, with or without certain contingencies in Europe. His statement, on the contrary, is based on the reasonable assumption that Mr. Arita meant what he said when he expressed concern over possible developments that may affect the status quo in southeastern Asia.

But the Secretary of State also made it unmistakably clear that any action by Japan to upset that status quo would meet with the profound disapproval of the United States. So much for Mr. Arita's trial balloon. And it may be more than a coincidence that close on the heels of Mr. Hull's statement, a Japanese admiralty spokesman declared that Japan has "no territorial designs" on the Dutch possessions.

The Skeptics Justified

When the President transmitted his budget message to Congress last January, showing how the deficit for the coming fiscal year could be cut to $1,716,000,000, commentators were for the most part skeptical. This estimate assumed that new taxes amounting to $460,000,000 would be raised, that $700,000,000 would be recaptured from Federal lending agencies, that parity payments would not be voted, and that the greatly reduced estimates for work relief would stand.

Mr. Roosevelt did, however, reserve the right to ask for additional relief funds. "If conditions fail to meet our hopes," he said, "I may . . . submit revised estimates later in the session."

Less than four months after making that pronouncement the President has in effect asked for a 50 per cent increase in the WPA appropriation. That is implied by the request for authority to spend in eight months a sum originally intended to last the coming fiscal year.

If the relief need is as the President indicates, he should request Congress to vote the additional sum forthwith and not leave to the incoming Congress the unpleasant duty of voting a deficiency appropriation. That would entail shifting a responsibility which the present Administration should itself assume.

Moreover, to grant the President the discretionary authority requested would in effect constitute a return to the discredited system of lump sum appropriations, despite the President's assurance that he is not seeking abandonment of the apportionment principle.

For the chief advantage of apportionment is that it offers protection against precisely those demands for deficiency appropriations which are foreshadowed by Mr. Roosevelt's letter sent to the Speaker of the House yesterday.

A Study In Contrasts

Thomas E. Dewey's characterization of Washington as a "boom town" has aroused derisive comment in some quarters. Nevertheless, Mr. Dewey is right, judging by the statistical criteria usually applied to gauge the prosperity of a community.

While only 126,000 of the more than 930,000 employes of the Government are attached to Washington bureaus, that is 60,000 more than were here at the end of 1932. The addition of such an army of people, steadily employed at modest but generally adequate salaries, would spell a boom for cities a good deal larger than Washington. And to their number should be added the growing number of other persons attracted here because of the great expansion of Government activities, to say nothing of a tourist influx estimated to bring $60,000,000 yearly into the Capital.

Unfortunately there is another side to the picture, not apparent to the casual observer. Those who grapple with the problems of the destitute and unemployed must often find it difficult to believe that Washington is among the so-called rich cities of the United States. For if it were judged by the adequacy of the provision made for underprivileged residents it would certainly be far down the scale.

The disgraceful conditions prevailing in certain local welfare institutions have recently been brought to the attention of the country at large by public-spirited actions of Mrs. Roosevelt. The niggardliness of the appropriations for direct relief in the local budget is not so generally known.

It helps to explain, however, the drive to include Washington among the cities enjoying the benefits of the Federal food stamp plan. That plan providing for free distribution of certain surplus commodities, has now been indorsed by the Southwest Citizens Association as a means of lowering food costs for needy families. As a matter of fact, it is a device for shifting a part of the direct relief costs for the District's needy to the Federal Government.

Since the stamp plan is necessarily of limited application its benefits should be confined to cities suffering from a high degree of unemployment, or for other reasons incapable of making adequate provision for local relief cases. Washington certainly does not belong in that category. It can, Congress willing, make ample provisions for all legitimate relief needs. And far from having a serious local unemployment problem, contributions last year to the District unemployment insurance funds were between four and five times the amount needed to meet local benefit payments.

Nevertheless, probably because this city is without power to govern itself, it makes virtually no provision for the families of employables unable to find jobs. For instance, when WPA workers were dropped last summer under the 18 months clause, less than 2 per cent of those dismissed were being given direct relief the following November, although over 60 per cent had no employment of any kind.

As Congress is primarily responsible for the unsatisfactory situation in the District, there is a certain justification in the District's endeavors to obtain Federal aid, apart from WPA jobs, to supplement the deficiencies of direct relief. Nevertheless, it is an unedifying spectacle for the rest of the country to have the District Government begging for a surplus that poorer communities could use to great advantage.

In denying the District the right to make adequate provision in the local budget for its needy, Congress is directly encouraging other communities to try to shift their responsibilities to the Federal Government.

Independent Iceland

Like the constituent members of the British Commonwealth of Nations, Denmark and Iceland are independent nations linked together by fealty to a common monarch. The King of Denmark is also, by virtue of the 1918 Danish-Icelandic Act of Union, the sovereign of Iceland.

With the establishment of a German "protectorate" over Denmark last week, Iceland's situation became anomalous. But the liberty-loving people of that island have cut the Gordian knot by promptly severing the one legal tie binding them to the invaded mother country. For the duration of the war, or at least for the duration of German domination over Denmark, Iceland will be completely independent.

Under the circumstances it is wholly appropriate that the United States is giving sympathetic consideration to the suggestion, from the government at Reykjavik, that direct diplomatic relations be established between Iceland and this Nation.

Such a development would not only be further proof that the United States has no intention of recognizing any claim to Iceland which Germany, as conqueror of Denmark, may wish to advance. It would also emphasize our friendship for a nation whose democratic parliament is the oldest in the world.

Propaganda Analysis

"If you want to converse with me," said Voltaire, "you must first define your terms."

This is sound advice, particularly in these days when words of high emotional content are frequently bandied about in reckless disregard of their precise meaning.

For instance, there is "propaganda." It was once a highly respectable word, used primarily in connection with propagation of the Christian faith. In many quarters it has now become a term surcharged with wholly sinister connotations. Actually, propaganda is a vital social function and no form of progress would be possible without it.

This does not mean that people can afford to be indifferent to unscrupulous propaganda or to the malicious uses to which it can be put. Such an attitude is dangerous, particularly in wartime. But it is equally dangerous to assume that the propagandists are all on one side of any issue.

A speaker before the D. A. R. conference meeting in Washington this week proved himself the victim of this prevalent fallacy when in the course of a plea that the United States stay out of the war he argued that "The most important thing for us to do is to refrain from succumbing to propaganda."

What he meant by propaganda was obviously propaganda designed to persuade the United States that justice, decency and our own national interests are all bound up with the Allied cause. But there is another form of war propaganda, at least equally active, which seeks to persuade the American people that they can and should be wholly indifferent to the European struggle. And by a strange quirk of circumstances this propaganda has emanated not only from convinced isolationists but also from Communist and Nazi sources.

Certainly it would suit the purposes of Germany—and Russia—to have the American people believe that their sympathies for the Allies are misdirected. Yet such propaganda, because it can readily be coordinated with the desire of every sane American for peace, is perhaps as dangerous to the United States as propaganda designed to persuade the American people to go to war. Because the Nation is on guard against the latter it only arouses bitter indignation. The propaganda of the Nazis and Reds, on the other hand, bears fruit because it is subtly designed to blend with pacifist and isolationist feeling.

How little this propaganda bears any relationship to reality can be gauged by the opinion of such a man as Admiral Harold R. Stark, the chief of naval operations. Admiral Stark is and perforce must be a realist. He cannot assume that what happens in Europe does not concern us merely because he might wish that were the case. On the contrary he is forced to assume that we cannot escape the impact of European developments and for that reason he insists that our naval appropriations be further increased.

Admiral Stark and other technicians to whom the actual problem of defense is entrusted are too cool-headed to be taken in by propaganda. What influences them is facts. And it is precisely these facts which would be subtly blacked out by much of the propaganda to which the American people are now being subjected.

Sublime Detachment

James A. Farley is a politician of the highest eminence. So, for that matter, is Franklin D. Roosevelt. Individually they belong among the ablest practitioners of an ancient art. Together they have piled up notable records of achievement.

Politics is in their blood and always, in the past, has never been very far from their thoughts or their conversation. And this happens to be a political year par excellence. Yet when the President and Postmaster General met last Tuesday for luncheon and an outing to the ball park, their conversation carefully stopped short of the point where politics becomes interesting. Details of the Democratic National Convention were discussed, but there was no mention of Presidential candidates, actual or potential.

That, at least, is what President Roosevelt told his press conference yesterday and that is what all must believe. Unquestionably it was, for both parties (in the individual sense) an exhibition of sublime detachment. But it must have been a little like discussing the war without ever mentioning Hitler or Stalin.

A New Spirit?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: If the time spent by theologians in teaching fables about Adam and Eve, Joshua, who controlled the sun, Jonah and the whale, not to mention those fiery depths where sinners simmer eternally, had been utilized in seeking ways and means to outlaw war, it is at least conceivable that peace could prevail today

With so-called Christian nations engaged in still another death struggle, it would seem that the time had arrived for churches to discard age-old superstitions and make a concerted effort to check "mass murder," if indeed civilization expects to survive. In other words, let us make religion more workable, more practical.

The last World War, fought to make the world safe for democracy, was indorsed by the great majority of Christian organizations, who held the opinion that an Allied victory would bring lasting security. They discovered to their sorrow that peace is not promoted by hurling bombs on the heads of opponents. As bombs have been tried and found wanting, why not give "brotherhood" a trial?

Wake Too Late?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Will America awake like Norway, the morning after the night before?

Who will be our Vidkun Quisling, Norway's Judas?

President Roosevelt recognized Communist Russia in 1933. He did not recant his allegiance to Communist Russia till their invasion of Finland shamed him into a front-page repentance. In a bullying speech to the children of the American Youth Congress he denounced Russia. He has since denounced, with long-distance threats, both Russia and her ally, Nazi Germany.

But is there perfect contrition back of this front page repentance? Is President Roosevelt truly contrite that he held Communist Russia to his bosom for six years while Communist Russia, through her own Vidkun Quisling agents and fellow travelers, built up the Communist party in the United States?

The Walter-Logan Bill

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:—A word of appreciation for your editorial of April 7 on the President's sideswipe at the Walter-Logan bill. I share your views because while the Chief Executive may have wished the average reader to treat his remarks as casual, yet to me they seemed to be very carefully thought out.

But even taking him at his word, if any of us can be expected after waiting seven or eight years to have him fulfill some 1932 promises and pledges—even taking him at his word, what right has any man no matter who he be—President or the humblest citizen—to comment on something that he doesn't know anything about.

Looked at in this light Francis E. Walter, a chosen and elected representative of the people, gives careful thought to a proposition, helps to prepare a bill and irrespective of any merits that it may embody an executive officer—not charged with making the laws—an executive officer who has appointed a lot of bureau chiefs and administrators, sensing that it might limit his autocratic powers, is against it.

Now our people have had plenty of this during the first term of the New Deal, but with each passing day more and more people are in revolt against the further continuation of usurped powers. Your observation that such loose comment is not less irresponsible because it comes from the White House is a mild retort.

If responsibility sobers not only the judgment but the expression of an individual, then such comment from the White House is much more to be regretted than if it came from an humble or a misinformed or a misguided individual from the ranks.

Thanks again for your article. I hope the Congress will hear from the people back home.

Workers Alliance Viewpoint

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: We were amazed to see your editorial "For Ulterior Ends?" in the Sunday Post, containing a most unfair and unwarranted attack on the Workers Alliance and the C. I. O. The editorial intimates that our desire to see a larger and better works program may be based on a "wish" to destroy private industry.

The editorial is unfair because The Post did not see fit to print a single line of our statement on our testimony; the charge is unwarranted because it is based on no facts, but rather appears to be designed to throw dust in the people's eyes on the eve of an important decision on relief to the needy.

We are more and more convinced that if private enterprise in America is wrecked, it will be due to the sort of blindness to the facts of unemployment represented in your editorial. This blindness dominated the Hoover policy; and it brought private enterprise down to the chaos of February, 1933. Private enterprise has revived and been stimulated every time the present Administration helped to create purchasing power and useful work for those private industry would not employ. Every time the Administration cut off this purchasing power, as in 1937, private enterprise slumped into new crisis.

We have no apologies to make in asking for 3,000,000 WPA jobs and for wages to permit these Federal employes at least a minimum decency.

There are 11,000,000 unemployed now. Giving work to 3,000,000 is the minimum obligation the Federal Government should assume. Let private industry show it can hire some of these 8,000,000 unemployed as a warrant for reducing the WPA rolls.

We certainly have no excuse to make for proposing an increase in WPA wages. Today the monthly wage—$54 for a full month's work—does not even permit the workers to live in minimum decency or even to keep fit enough to do a day's work. As a matter of fact, these low wages are so undermining the health of the workers as to make them eventually unemployable. Paying such low wages is just not good business.

Our program would add $1,500,000,000 a year to purchasing power. What would happen to this money? It would flow into the channels of trade and industry; it would strengthen our domestic economy at a time when we are becoming more and more dependent on war orders. Every cent of the money would be spent for food, clothing, rent, medical care and transportation.

About 20 per cent of it would end up in the coffers of interest and dividend collectors. It would increase national income by $3,500,000,000; it would increase private employment by more than 1,000,000.

How in the name of reason does The Post think this will wreck private industry? What is the alternative at this time?

Symphony Controversy

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As a member of the National Symphony Orchestra Association, deeply interested in the success of the orchestra, I would like to take this opportunity to express my thanks and appreciation to the men who have been so generous in giving to Washington for the last nine years, such splendid concerts for so little remuneration, and to express my regrets that the leaders in the Orchestra Association have shown so little appreciation of their efforts, their musicianship, their accomplishments.

Many of the association members have stressed the fact that the opportunity to play in the orchestra has been a most valuable experience for the men in order to justify their low pay. True, but has not the opportunity to conduct the orchestra been a most valuable experience for Dr. Kindler, who was an unknown conductor before he organized the orchestra?

Should not credit be given where credit is due? Both, so far, have done a splendid job, but let it not be forgotten that the men have contributed as much to the success of the orchestra as Dr. Kindler. After all, the music does come from the instruments and not from the conductor's baton.

I do not blame the men for rejecting the last offer made by the board of directors in which they added a proviso that if the intended drive goal were not reached, the men only would have to agree to a reduction of one to three weeks' pay, thus bringing next year's salary below that of the present one. Evidently, they did not deem it fair, in the event that the goal was not reached, to reduce the salaries of the conductor or the managing force, all of whom are getting very much more than the men, the ones who make an orchestra possible, for without the musicians, all of whom have put years and years of work and study into their training, there would be no orchestra.

When a suggestion was made at the final meeting of the association, by a member, to pare down expenses in places that would not work a hardship on anyone, some members of the association laughed. To them it was ridiculous to think of paring anywhere but from the pay of the men who have not yet been paid a living wage.

When asked what Dr. Kindler's salary was, we were told that it could not be divulged. Why not? Has not the public, who has most generously contributed to the sustaining fund, a right to know what the salaries are and to determine whether a fair distribution of funds has been made?

Just before the meeting was brought to a close, an expression of thanks and appreciation was made for the board of directors, the manager, the campaign workers and Dr. Kindler. No mention was made of the men in the orchestra. Have they worked in vain for nine years? They have been urged for years, in the name of art, to be patient, and fair pay would reward their loyalty.

The past year has been the most successful one on record and they are denied a fair increase. It was they who made the greatest sacrifices in the beginning. Are the music lovers of Washington going to let these men down? Nine years is a long time.

The Post Impressionist

Willie's Room

Exactly 75 years ago, on Wednesday, April 19, 1865, an open-faced boy, with dark hair and big eyebrows, by the name of William T. Clark, sat down to write a letter to his sister Ida.

Willie, who was in his early twenties, was a soldier in the Union Army. A member of Company D, Thirteenth Massachusetts Infantry, he had been detailed to Washington to serve in the quartermaster's department as a stenographer. From his rather bold looks in an old photograph, you would guess that his office job didn't suit him.

Willie lived in a rooming house at 453 Tenth street (now No. 516), a plain four-story brick building. According to the owner, William Peterson, who was a Swedish tailor, the house was built in 1849.

His single room was on the second floor, just above the street level, at the end of a dark, narrow hall. His room was unbelievably small, about 9 by 17 feet, really just a part of the hallway. And his room was dark and depressing—there were only two small windows, and these looked out on an old porch and a bleak court. The ceiling was low and sloping.

Willie had done his best to cheer his living quarters up. Over his bed was hung a lithograph of Rosa Bonheur's "Horse Fair," and brightening, somewhat, the striped Victorian paper on the other walls were an engraved copy of Herring's "Village Blacksmith" and two smaller prints of "The Stable" and "Barn Yard," by the same artist. Two tiny chairs, with cane seats, one rocker, an ugly bureau and a stand with a marble top for a basin and pitcher filled the rest of the room.

That is about all that is known of Willie Clark—except the letter he wrote his sister. And, if Washington hadn't had jolting cobblestone streets, if somebody hadn't opened the door of the house and revealed lighted rooms on Good Friday night the week before, if a certain Dr. Charles Taft hadn't found what he called "a neat bedroom," there wouldn't have been that letter to sister Ida.

"Today the funeral of Mr. Lincoln takes place," wrote brother Willie. "The streets are being crowded at this early hour (9 a. m.) and the procession will probably not move for three hours.

"The past few days have been of intense excitement. Arrests are numerously made if any party is heard to utter secesh sentiments. The time has come when people cannot say what they please, for the people are awfully indignant; hundreds daily calling at the house to gain admission into my room.

"I was engaged nearly all of Sunday with one of Frank Leslie's special artists, aiding him in making a complete drawing of the last moments of Mr. Lincoln, as I know the position of everyone present. He succeeded in executing a fine sketch, which will appear in their paper. He wished to mention the names of all pictures in the room, particularly the photograph of yourself, Clara and Nannie, but I told him he must not do that as they were members of my family and I did not wish them to be made so public. He also urged me to give him my picture, or at least to allow him to take my sketch, but I could not see that, either.

"Everybody has a great desire to obtain some memento from my room, so that whoever comes in has to be closely watched for fear they will steal something. I have a lock of his hair which I have had neatly framed, also a piece of linen with a portion of his brain. The pillow and case upon which he lay when he died, and nearly all his wearing apparel, I intend to send to Robert Lincoln as soon as the funeral is over, as I consider him the most justly entitled to them. The same mattress is on my bed, and the same coverlid covers me nightly that covered him while dying.

"Inclosed you will find a piece of lace that Mrs. Lincoln wore on her head during the evening and was dropped by her while entering my room to see her dying husband; it is worth keeping for its historical value. The cushion worked by Clara and the cushion by you, you little dreamed would be so historically connected with such an event. Love to father, mother and Clara, and don't forget you have a brother, and send me a longer note soon. I will write again soon.

Your affec. brother,
WILLIE."

Oh, yes, there is one other fact that is known about Willie Clark. He must have been a short fellow. His low, walnut, four-poster bed was so small that when Abe Lincoln was placed on it, he had to be stretched out diagonally.

Nobody knows whether Willie realized that his own room was the exact size of the cabin room in which the President was born. But, small, bleak room or not, Willie must have felt that it was no longer his alone.

Shape Of The War

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: We have all been watching with avidity for Walter Lippmann's etching of "The General Shape of the War," after his extended sojourn in Europe. Every student of the conflict will scan with great interest the picture which he portrays in The Post of April 16.

From my point of view, the detail to be noted most importantly is his reference to Russia: "The Russians have made it clear enough that they will passively resist" organization of Russian production to serve Germany's war needs. And he says that the Nazis now realize that they cannot organize Russian production for Nazi needs.

Incidentally, the Russian government is no happier at Hitler's invasion of Scandinavia than Hitler was at Russia's advance to the Baltic. Their interests in the Balkans are not concordant. And the point is that the Allies and their friends should refrain from such propaganda against Stalin as would drive these contending forces into genuinely joint action.

Do not forget "the infantry of the snow and the cavalry of the wild blast" on the boundless territory of 180,000,000 people.

As The Turks See It

By Dorothy Thompson

The War And The Balkans

Ankara, April 14.

IN THE FEW days I have been in Turkey I have had long conversations with ministers, other government functionaries and with leading Turkish journalists. I have also talked with foreign diplomatists and journalists. The sum of various views presented is approximately as follows:

Turkey signed a treaty with Great Britain last October, in the hope that it would help avert war. At the time Turkey believed that a sufficiently strong peace front would discourage Germany from moving any farther than it had already done. The Turkish government had previously discussed the British treaty with Russia and had been advised by Russia to go ahead and sign. The Turks are now embittered against Russia because they know that while Russia was advising them to sign with Britain she was negotiating with the Nazis. They feel especially disillusioned because prior to this relations between Turkey and Russia had been model.

The Turks admit frankly that they owe Russia a great deal, both for the immediate recognition of their independence and for the political and economic aid which Russia gave when they sorely needed it.

In so far as they excuse Russia's conduct they do so on two grounds: First, her extreme internal weakness which they think makes it impossible for Russia to become involved in a major war; and secondly, the distrust which Russia has of the western nations, the fear that she would have to "pull western chestnuts out of the fire," and her feeling that the British were trying to engineer conflict between Germany and Russia rather than build a real peace front.

The Turks do not believe this thesis, but some of them do think that the British treated Russia with great lack of tact and were afraid of the Communist bogey. Outside of official circles, which are of course very discreet, there is a good deal of criticism of Britain's policy in the last years.

The Turks also think the other neutrals made an enormous mistake in believing that, isolated, they could protect their neutrality in this war. They consider the Scandinavian countries outstanding examples of this lack of a realistic neutrality policy.

Turkey has had the longest stretch of peace in more than 100 years' history, and this era of peace has corresponded to a period of national reconstruction. She suffered war after war under the Ottoman Empire, lost her empire in the World War—in which she suffered prodigious losses—and afterward, in the struggle for independence, was engaged in war with one or another of the Balkan countries until 1924. The idea that this peace, with its work of reconstruction in every field, should be interrupted by another war is profoundly discouraging.

But Turkey argues thus: This is essentially a war between nations satisfied with the status quo and nations that want to change the status quo by force. Nobody believes that there is such a thing as a permanent status quo, but the Turks think that neither Britain nor France was strong enough, nor by nature belligerent enough, to want to oppose even radical changes, provided such changes occurred through negotiation and evolution.

In the Turkish concept the term "status quo nations" is by no means synonymous with "have" nations. They point out that some of the most peaceful nations and those most anxious to maintain the status quo are poor in natural resources.

The Turks, who have definitely renounced the idea of imperialism and consider themselves well rid of the congeries of nations and the vast areas they previously ruled that rotted away from under them, believe that the strong states of the future will be those that are best organized internally to develop their own human and physical resources and to live on friendly terms with their neighbors. Thus, they count themselves on the side of the status quo nations and believe their fate is bound up with them.

THERE IS amazingly little anti-German feeling in Turkey. On the surface there actually is less than in Italy. The Turkish people like the Germans and greatly admire them. They admire their organization, their hygiene, science, technology and energy. They would like to work with the Germans, and believe that Germany could do a great deal for the development of Turkey, to the advantage of both countries. Indeed, Germany has already done much. Practically all the machinery in Turkey is of German origin. Before the war Turkey had invited many German professors to her universities—the new universities which are modern Turkey's pride.

Also, the ideology of Mustapha Kemal had much in common with the Nazi ideology. Kemal created modern Turkey under the standard of breaking the Treaty of Sevres and uniting all Turks within Turkey, even to the extent of exchanging Greek and Turkish populations. He fought to drive the Mahometan Church out of politics, and had a great struggle with the Mahometan priests. He established, if not a totalitarian, a strongly authoritarian single-party state, and although modern Turkey is progressive and has performed the phenomenal feat of liberating the Turks from Moslem traditions it could by no stretch of the imagination be called a liberal state. Its clash is not with Nazi ideology, but with Nazi imperialism.

In evaluating the situation in the Balkans as a whole the Turks argue as follows, always emphasizing that they are speaking only from hypothesis and logic: "We don't know what anybody else is going to do," they say. "We only know what we shall do under certain circumstances."

There are reasons why they think that Germany may be slow to take the initiative in the Balkans before affairs are settled in the west; they believe it very difficult for Germany, Italy and Russia to agree on any common program for the Balkans except maintenance of the status quo.

Russia certainly does not want the Germans on the Black Sea—that would be catastrophe for her. The Russians are wholly satisfied with the present status of the Dardanelles in Turkish hands.

Italy does not want the Germans on the Adriatic, and she is equally afraid of Russian influence in the Balkans whether it takes the form of Pan-Slavism, always latent, or whether it means the extension of communism.

Anticommunism is the one thing in foreign policy on which the Fascist Party, the Vatican, the Italian dynasty and the Italian people are all united.

Germany also needs the resources which the Balkans can furnish but which might be seriously disorganized by war. For instance, in the event of an attack on Rumania that country's oil wells undoubtedly would be destroyed.

The Turks are skeptical about the possibility of the totalitarian nations being able to agree on any program of dividing the Balkans into spheres of influence. They recall that even when Napoleon and Alexander sat down in amity at Tilsit, where all was love and kisses, the Balkans stumped them.

They see a certain analogy between Scandinavia and the Balkans. They argue that Germany will move in the Balkans only if Allied influence there becomes so strong that she feels forced to do so in order to protect her economic situation, but they doubt that mere economic action on the part of the Allies will be sufficient to cause Germany to move.

ALL ARGUMENTS are qualified by the remark: "of course, no one knows what Hitler may do or exactly why he may do it," and the Turks are more convinced of the possibility of illogicality in Hitler's moves because they see no sense at all in this war from Germany's standpoint. If Germany really wants "Lebensraum" they ask, why does Hitler make war to get what Germany would inevitably have obtained by peace?

If Germany had sought the peaceful collaboration of all the central European states and had made herself their patron and defender of their independence, no power on earth could have prevented her being the dominating power in Central and Eastern Europe, purely by weight of numbers and superior industrial and technical organization. So they argue that since this whole war is lunacy on Germany's part, you never can tell what new madness any day may bring.

Expenditures Paid

TO THE MEMBERS of the Building Service Employes' International Union of the American Federation of Labor:

Greetings.

Your honored international president George Scalise, who learned the trade of bargaining agent in that same school that was patronized by Willie Bioff, the dictator of the amusement craft unions, which is to say as bargaining agent for prostitutes, has recently bought a country mansion far from the crowded slums in which most of you live. He paid $22,500 for this home, and his expenditures on the same up to this point amount to about $35,000, all of it in currency. Investigation shows for some reason your international president does not like to use checks, and neither does he like to be known as the owner of a mansion; wherefore he formed a holding company to disguise his ownership.

Many of you—that is, the chambermaids among you—are caring for upward of 20 rooms every day in hotels ranging in character from mediocre to bad, for wages of $13 a week, and $20 a week is considered to be good pay for the most prosperous of you. Out of this you pay your initiation fees and dues, plus occasional fines for such offenses as speaking disrespectfully of your union officers.

On the off chance that some of you may have failed to read the provisions of the international constitution dealing with the duties and privileges of your president, you may be interested to read as follows:

AS THE RADIO orators says, "I quote: The president shall submit to the annual meeting of the general executive board a statement of the activities of his office and the amount expended since the last meeting of the general executive board. He shall draw vouchers on the general secretary-treasurer for such sums as his activities require, and the same shall be paid by the general secretary-treasurer." Unquote.

Another provision of the constitution says that all vouchers shall be submitted to your international president for approval and signature.

Now, your honored president boasts that there are 100,000 of you in good standing, which is to say that you are paid up, and it is a fact that the international treasury receives 35 cents a month from each of you, which would come to $35,000 a month, or $426,000 a year. But, allowing for a few delinquencies, let us say that the annual income of the international treasury is just $400,000 even.

So now what do we see?

Well, from the wording of those constitutional provisions it is plain enough that you are kicking together a fund of $400,000 a year out of your pay and giving George Scalise permission to help himself. Because it just says that he shall submit a statement of the amount expended, and that he shall draw vouchers for such sums as his activities require and that the general secretary-treasurer shall honor them with your money. It doesn't say that he must explain what he spent the money for. It says he shall submit a statement of the whole amount. And it doesn't specify which of his activities shall be financed by the union treasury. It just says that he shall draw vouchers, payable by the secretary-treasurer, for such sums as his activities require. His activities may include the purchase of a mansion or betting on the races, and under the terms of the constitution you have to finance them.

HOW DO YOU like that, and how do you like the further provision which gives him, personally, the power to allow to his fellow-officers of your union, including the ex-convicts among them, the sums which they may need or to withhold legitimate funds from any officers who happen to be legitimate?

You realize, don't you, that you never elected Scalise to the presidency of your union with free permission to dip into your annual contributions of $400,000. You never even voted on the presidency. You were just unionised under a charter issued by the A. F. of L.

If you can get a day off some time and get enough of you together you might hire a bus and drive up to see the mansion. Just drive by; don't go in. He might be entertaining his friend, little Augie, the old anti-labor racketeer who gave him his start.

Much Confusion

By Ernest Lindley

The Walter-Logan Bill

THERE ARE PROBLEMS too intricate readily to be grasped even by newspaper columnists. It has been with mounting awe, therefore, that I have read the explanations of the Walter-Logan bill by my various columnar colleagues.

The Walter-Logan bill is supposed to protect citizens against the exercise of arbitrary power by Government agencies. That is a noble purpose. That the bill achieves it is cheerfully assumed in most of the comment I have seen. After reading the bill, the committee reports on it, some of the testimony in the committee hearings, and several law journal analyses by experts, I was more than ever overcome with awe of my editorial-writing and columnar friends.

Mark Sullivan evidently had a similar experience. In plumping for the bill only a few days ago, he began by saying: "To try to explain this measure is to encounter one of the most frequent bedevilments that beset every writer of news from Washington . . . Even if there were space enough to print the bill in full, its necessarily technical, legal phraseology would not be easily understood."

Mr. Sullivan went on to prove his point. For, according to his column, the Walter-Logan bill would "set up a court outside the agency, an independent court."

THERE IS AT least one bill before Congress which would set up an independent administrative court to review the rulings and orders of Government agencies. It has not been debated in Congress at all. It is not the Walter-Logan bill, which was passed by the Senate last summer, and, in slightly different form, by the House this week. This bill contains no provision for an independent court.

The administrative court bill is Senate bill 916. The Walter-Logan bill, in its Senate form, was Senate bill 915. So even an arithmetical error of one digit can be a bedevilment.

Mark Sullivan is not so far off the track as are many other commentators on the bill. In fact, most of what he wrote was about the need for protecting the citizen from administrative absolutism. It applied as much to the purpose of the Walter-Logan bill as to the purpose of the bill he apparently was discussing, or to the purpose of a thousand other bills that might be introduced.

Several editorial writers have advocated passage of the Walter-Logan bill on the supposition that it separates the prosecuting from the judicial functions in quasi-judicial agencies. The bill makes no effort to do that. In fact, one of the committee reports on the bill rejects such a reform as impracticable.

Those editorial writers are no farther off the track than some of the lawyers' associations which have indorsed the bill. Among the indorsements put in the record of the House hearings appears praise for changes which are not in the bill and never were in it.

These lawyers' groups were no farther off the track than some of the Congressmen who engaged in the House debate this week. There was plenty of flag-waving and a fountain-display of constitutional platitudes, but only the scantiest exhibition of knowledge of the contents of the bill. Even fewer of the lawmakers seemed to have had any idea what its concrete effects would be.

The bill has been carefully studied by many persons qualified to judge its effects. The expert verdict against it is too impressive to be ignored. The Government experts are against it almost unanimously. These include men of long service in older agencies which preceded the New Deal.

IT HAS BEEN condemned on one side by the National Lawyers Guild, and on the other by the Committees on Federal Legislation and Administrative Law of the Association of the Bar of the City of New York. These committees are composed almost entirely of conservative lawyers belonging to firms which do a great deal of business before Government agencies. Several of them are firms having members who have been in the forefront of the opposition of the New Deal.

Among these conservative private lawyers who signed the report condemning the bill were:

John Foster Dulles, Arthur H. Dean, and Alfred Jaretzki, of the law firm of Sullivan & Cromwell. Mr. Dulles is one of the official advisers of Thomas E. Dewey. Cloyd Laporte, of Root, Clark, Buckner & Ballantine, Ralph Chandler, of Davis, Polk, Wardell, Gardiner & Reed. Orrin G. Judd, of Davies, Auerbach & Cornell. Paul D. Miller, of Mudge, Stern, Williams & Tucker. The bill has been taken apart and condemned by any number of law journal articles.

Simply stated, the verdict of these expert critics is that the Walter-Logan bill would not accomplish its purpose but would disrupt the executive side of the Government.

An Attorney General's committee of experts, headed by Dean Acheson, a distinguished lawyer and former Undersecretary of the Treasury, has been conducting an orderly and intensive investigation of the whole question of administrative law and procedure. It has submitted an interim report and special studies of a number of agencies. But with all due diligence, it does not feel that it can finish its work before the coming autumn.

When the Acheson committee reports, Congress will have something to go on. We need full protection against the arbitrary exercise of administrative power. But we don't need it any worse than we need protection against the uninformed use of legislative power to make hash of the machinery of government.

SALLY SALMINEN, author of "Mariana" (Farrar & Rinehart, $2.50), was born in the Aland Islands, which have been Finnish for 20 years, but her native tongue is Swedish. When Russia invaded Finland, she rushed home to do war-relief work, and in Helsinki, in February, she was married to a Dane . . . "Mariana" is the story of a girl who grew up on an Aland Island farm, whose father emigrated to America and never returned, whose brothers went to sea, whose sister married a Swede, whose friends drifted away to the big cities—Mariehamn, Helsinki, Stockholm—all, so far as her story goes, cities of peace.

You cannot read a Scandinavian story today without having black headlines from the newspapers break into the neatly arranged type of the book page. But Sally Salminen writes here of the tragedies and comedies and slow progress of peacetime. Life is hard on those sea island farms; and harder still to young folks who have had a glimpse of city life. Milking has for generations been women's work; the girls hate it, the men despise it. Only gentry have vegetable gardens; true farmers despite plumbing. Mariana, who has glimpsed city ways through the eyes of her childhood friend Nanny, marries a farmer, but she revolts. The Finnish writer is telling here much the same story as Mary Wilkins Freeman told, a half century ago, in a New England setting. Mrs. Freeman's farm-wife moved into the big barn her husband had built for his pampered cattle; Mariana makes her husband cut windows in the dark farm kitchen, pipe water from the spring and volunteer to milk.

It is a simple, moving story of changing life in the post-war decades in that Scandinavian world which, a year ago, seemed to be Europe's sane island of peace and progress. Here you see the city girl, recklessly smoking, painting her lips and her fingernails, cruising alone with the man she wants to marry and marrying him, and when his business fails, cheerfully setting up a beauty parlor. You see the bewildered country girl who has had a taste of books and clean fingernails, first running away from the manure piles, then winning her farmer husband to an understanding of her exhaustion and revolt, and herself working through to something of his primitive and eternal faith in the soil. It is an old theme, faced here with that unsophisticated integrity which we have learned to think of as Scandinavian.

THERE WAS no farm escape for the people of Caroline Slate's novel, "The Triumph of Willie Pond" (Vanguard, $2.50). This is a bitterly satiric story of contemporary American life. Willie Pond is a meek little man with a cough, who wants to work. The Pons are, in a sense, the city counterparts of John Steinbeck's Joads. They love each other; they have too many children; they can't make ends meet. Instead of dreaming of California, George, the eldest son, dreams of buying a $10 car. Then, maybe, he can get a job in the next town. There are always jobs just over the next range of hills, too far to walk.

Miss Southard, the town social worker, doesn't think much of the Ponds. George's desire for an automobile seems to her almost criminal. Betsey, who demands more cans of beans, is hard. Mary, 14 years old, is already a "sex problem." Sara Ponds keeps a dirty house. Why should hardworking, industrious taxpayers, she asks, support a family like that? . . . You can almost hear Miss Southard talking. In fact, you probably have.

Mrs. Slade has 20 years of up-State social work behind her. She knows her stuff, from city relief boards through children's courts to State hospitals. She knows the cruel ignorance of the I-always-say-if-you-really-want-to-work-you-can-find-work-to-do school of evasion. She knows the human meaning of those efficient "economies" in the relief budgets which are so welcomed by the chambers of commerce. She knows, too, just where and how graft enters the relief business.

Willie Pond was run down by an automobile, and the Pond's family problems were thereby settled. The hospital discovered Willie's tuberculosis. With Willie totally disabled his family was eligible for a State pension; and the State bureau was more generous than Miss Southard. The Ponds moved out of their cockroach shanty. The children had real beds to sleep in. The State spent a thousand dollars—more—to cure Willie's tuberculosis. And then Willie, cured, discovered that because he was cured he was back where he had been before. The pension stopped; George's auto was a bar to relief, and Willie, despite the cure, wasn't equal to ditch digging.

Time Counts Heavily

By Barnet Nover

The War Spreads—And Speeds Up

IN THE PAST ten days the war in Europe not only spread but has also speeded up. The hare has replaced the tortoise as the symbol of the struggle. Never again, as long as the conflict lasts, is there likely to be a return to that state of inactivity which remained practically unbroken during the seven months following the conquest of Poland.

The invasion of Scandinavia was equivalent to a tacit admission by Hitler that the advantages of a prolonged stalemate were not with Germany but with the Allies. A war of economic attrition such as Great Britain and France have been waging against the Third Reich might be slow in its operation but it can be cumulative, and might be disastrous in its effects.

Since time was not on Germany's side the Fuehrer's tactics obviously required action of the kind which might deprive the Allies of the advantages of the time factor. And, as it worked out, this has meant the supplementing of economic considerations by motives of strategy as the driving force of Germany's war policy.

WHATEVER the outcome of the present fighting in Norway may be, it is already plain that it will be a long time before the economic life of Norway, Denmark and Sweden is restored to a normal basis. Norway is now a battlefield. Denmark is a nation whose ability to produce depends very largely on its ability to import fodder and other essentials. And these are now effectively cut off as a result of the destruction of Danish neutrality. And facing invasion, Sweden's ability to export is steadily diminishing.

"Wants to be able to do it just by pressing a button."

Should the war in Scandinavia last, Germany will be unable to get from that region the supplies hitherto vouchsafed her. Of course what she cannot get through purchase she might get through seizure. But such expropriations would in the long run, only have the effect of further demoralizing the economic machinery of those states, and further diminishing their capacity to produce either for domestic use or for export.

This will hurt the Allies as well as Germany. But whereas the Allies do have alternative sources of supply, Germany has not. But whatever economic losses Germany might ultimately suffer from her Scandinavian venture might be offset by strategic gains. And it was to secure these strategic gains that Hitler prepared to take the risks involved in the invasion of Scandinavia.

IF HIS PLAN succeeds Germany will be in a position to intensify her air and submarine attacks on British naval and merchant ships and thus weaken the blockade of the Reich while strengthening the counter-blockade against Great Britain. But if she is to do that she must be able to do it quickly. Time presses.

But time presses for the Allies as well. They cannot afford to let Germany entrench herself in Norway which would mean, sooner or later, the economic if not also the political domination of Sweden. And failure to dislodge the Reich from Norway in a reasonably short time might have disastrous repercussions throughout Europe.

AND TIME presses for Italy, too. Italy has nothing to gain from an Allied victory, which more than ever would make her a prisoner in the Mediterranean. Nor could such a victory, involving as it would the destruction of the Nazi system in Germany, be anything but a disaster for the Fascist regime. On the other hand, a German victory might lead to the extension of Italian hegemony over the Mediterranean and the expansion of the Italian empire.

Yet Italy faces great risks in entering the war on the German side so long as Allied sea power is unbroken, and so long as the odds are not heavily weighted in the Third Reich's favor.

If Germany maintains unbroken her position in Norway, Mussolini may decide that the pendulum has no swung sufficiently in the Third Reich's direction to make it worth while for Italy to join her axis partner. It is obvious, however, that he must do so while Germany still has need of Italy.

That Il Duce believes the present to be the indicated moment is, however, questionable. What is more likely is that he is maneuvering Italy into a position where all that will remain before action begins is to press a button. That may explain the mysterious fleet movements of the Italian navy, the large scale Italian reinforcements in Albania, the psychological preparations for war in the form of an unceasing barrage of propaganda against the Allies, the continued emphasis on true or imaginary German successes. But even with all these preparations taken Mussolini can still decide that discretion is the better part of valor, and if it is the Allies, rather than Germany, who happen to be winning, keep Italy neutral.

To a very real degree, therefore, these are days of decision. The fighting in Norway can prove the watershed between victory or defeat for Germany, and for the Allies.

Wheeler Hits CAA Change

In a statement of one sentence, Senator Burton K. Wheeler, Democrat of Montana, chairman of the Senate Committee on Interstate Commerce, yesterday announced his opposition to the proposal of President Roosevelt to reorganize the Civil Aeronautics Authority by making it a board of the Department of Comerce and abolish the air safety board. He said:

"I have given careful thought and consideration to the proposal to return control of American civil aviation to the Department of Commerce and I am preparing definitely to oppose the move."

U. S. Is Isolationist, but Hopes Fervently Allies Will Win, Editors Report

Newspaper editors from all parts of the United States, gathered here for their annual convention, report that the country is pro-Ally but overwhelmingly against American participation in the European war.

The views of the men who have come here to attend the eighteenth annual convention of the American Society of Newspaper Editors at the National Press Club were ascertained in a symposium conducted by The Washington Post.

Question No. 1 was: Is there any decided sentiment in your part of the country for or against United States participation in the war?

Editors from the North and South, East and West answered emphatically that sentiment was strongly against participation. However, here and there an editor reported a growing minority feeling that American intervention was inevitable.

JOHN COWLES, president of the Minneapolis Star Journal (he is also vice president of the Des Moines Register and Tribune and Look) said that sentiment in Minnesota is decidedly against participation in the war..... "But," he added, "there is a small, growing minority that regards our intervention, at least with naval and air support, as inevitable if it develops that only in that way can Great Britain and France be saved from complete defeat."

H. R. PINCKARD, editor of the Herald-Advertiser, Huntington, W. Va., had this to say:

"I sense a growth of belligerency, a feeling that Britain is going to lose the war, but no frank recognition that such sentiments are likely to draw us into what people profess to hate with great intensity."

GEORGE B. ARMSTEAD, managing editor of the Hartford (Conn.) Courant, established in 1764, said there was "considerable opinion" in his city that the avowed purpose of Russia and Germany to destroy democratic governments had to be defeated. He continued:

"If, sooner or later, that means America must fight very likely it would be less costly to fight sooner rather than later when British sea power might be destroyed, or France overrun."

WILLIAM ALLEN WHITE, famous critic editor of the Emporia Gazette, used one sentence to describe sentiment in Kansas.

"We are isolationists," he said.

DWIGHT MARVIN, editor of the Record Newspapers in Troy, N. Y., and treasurer of the American Society of Newspaper Editors, said:

"Within our territory there is no sentiment for participation in the European war and strong antagonism toward every move in that direction."

Question No. 2 asked by The Post: Are you getting discouraged about the prospects for civilization?

MALCOLM BINGAY, editorial director of the Detroit Free Press, answered, "No. It is just beginning—a clearing away of refuse."

MAJ. FREDERICK SULLENS, of the Daily News, Jackson, Miss., said:

"No. Civilization has been going to hell ever since it started and has not arrived yet."

IRVING W. HART, of the Idaho Statesman, echoed this sentiment with the remark:

"There have been few times in the history of the world when there wasn't some madman raising hell somewhere on the face of the globe."

H. D. PAULSON, editor of the Fargo, N. Dak., Forum, said he was "not discouraged, but a bit jittery."

Another question posed by The Post was: Do you think that whether President Roosevelt seeks a third term will be decisive as to whether the next President is Democratic or Republican?

RAYMOND H. McCAW, night managing editor of the New York Times, said:

"If Mr. Roosevelt seeks the nomination for a third term I am betting that he gets it and that we again will have a Democratic President."

DONALD J. STERLING, of the Oregon Journal, Portland, Oreg., who is president of the A. S. N. E., said that President Roosevelt would carry Oregon if he ran. If he didn't run, Mr. Sterling said, the Republican nominee would win.

V. V. DALLMAN, of the Illinois State-Register, Springfield, Ill., said:

"It is my personal opinion that the Chicago convention will stampede to Mr. Roosevelt and that if he accepts a third-term nomination, he will be the odds-on favorite in the election."

F. A. MILLER, president and editor of the South Bend Tribune, South Bend, Ind., made this reply:

"Undoubtedly should President Roosevelt be nominated for a third term it would have a decisive effect on the election. Beyond question the unprejudiced and unselfish people of the United States are against any person seeking and being elected a third and successive term to the Presidency. Should Mr. Roosevelt be nominated the Republicans probably would win with any Republican now conspicuously a candidate for the Republican nomination."

ROBERT CHOATE, managing editor of The Boston Herald and the Boston Traveler, said:

"Whether F. D. R. runs or not, there will be a Republican in the White House next January."

W. A. BAILEY, editor of the Kansas City Kansan, saw it in precisely the same way.

ALFRED G. HILL, editor of the Hub, Kearney, Nebr., reported that there was an increasing swing to the Republicans. He thought that Roosevelt could be beaten. The most formidable Democratic candidate, he said, seemed to be Senator Wheeler. On the Republican side, he said, Dewey looks increasingly like a "natural."

The question "What is the greatest specific economic need of your State?" elicited a remarkable variety of responses.

Some of the answers to this question included:

"Take the pressure off of industry," ARTHUR REMMELL, of Fort Wayne.

"The greatest specific economic need of Louisiana is a restoration of political honesty and elimination of waste in handling of public funds. This, fortunately, has been assured through the recent election of Sam Jones as Governor . . ."—JOHN D. EWING, publisher, the Shreveport Times.

"Peaceful and cooperative industrial relations."—MICHAEL A. GORMAN, editor, the Flint Journal, Flint, Mich.

"Combination of capital and education for farmers."—TABLOT PATRICK, publisher, Goldsboro, N. C., News-Argus.

"In Texas, the agricultural problem is most acute. There will be no real recovery here until the farmers again have something resembling adequate purchasing power. Morale is at lower ebb among agricultural people than I have ever known it,"—MRS. OVETA CULP HOBBY, executive vice president of the Houston, Tex., Post.

Mrs. Waters Solves Food Shortage Problem

By Martha Ellyn,
The Post Food Editor.

IF YOU were confronted with the problem of serving 16 guests for breakfast and your larder yielded but 3 eggs, 2 cans of corn, ½ pound of bacon and a jar of caviar what would you do? This story tells how Mrs. Laura Waters, career woman, of Washington, met the situation.

Having just returned from a trip, Mrs. Waters had not completely stocked her food supply, but she did think that she had enough eggs and bacon in the house to invite 16 guests home for scrambled eggs and bacon. On arriving home she found, to her amazement, that there were but 3 eggs, half pound of bacon, milk and a jar of caviar in the refrigerator. The emergency shelf was definitely not an emergency one, but it did yield two cans of corn. So Mrs. Waters decided the only thing to do was to concoct a new breakfast dish.

Martha Ellyn

Into a skillet went the bacon, cut in pieces. After it had been fried, the contents of two cans of corn were added, to which had been added three beaten eggs. A dash of salt and then the crowning addition, the jar of caviar.

A Popular Concoction

With this invented dish Mrs. Waters served toast and coffee. So successful was the dish that guests from Harrisburg, Pa., asked for the recipe and now the emergency dish has become popular as a Sunday supper dish among Mrs. Waters' friends in Harrisburg.

Mrs. Waters has been a very busy person since she established Waters Travel Bureau ten years ago. When travel is normal, there are 14 on her staff, but now that it has been curtailed by foreign unrest the staff has fewer workers. As president of the National Parks Club she directs the activities of this organization, which has 4,000 members. And as chairman of the committee for decision of the place to be chosen for national headquarters of the Business and Professional Women's Club she is attempting to have the headquarters established in Washington. She is also a member of the Women's City Club, a member of the Soroptimist Club, having served as vice president the last year. She is a member of the Women's Overseas League, having served with the Volunteer Nurse Aid Corps in the World War.

Manages Her Home, Too.

With all her business activities and club affiliations Mrs. Waters still has time to manage a home and entertain guests. I inquired of her how she was able to entertain when she is such a busy person and she said that the buffet supper is the answer to her entertaining. This type of meal, she says, is easy to prepare, allows her guests to help themselves and is an excellent way to mix the guests.

Mrs. Waters has given me one of her favorite buffet supper menus. It is easy to prepare and certainly is appealing.

Buffet Supper Menu

Baked Beans Green Salad
Boston Brown Bread
Olives Celery Radishes
Ice Cream Cake Coffee

The baked ham is sliced, then spread with English mustard. The slices are put back together in the original form of the meat and kept hot in the oven. A roast of beef is handled in the same way. Baked beans, Mrs. Waters says, is one dish that she has as a "must" on her supper menus, as all of her friends think they are a distinctive dish.

Mrs. Water's recipe for baked beans is found elsewhere on this page.

Career Woman in Domestic Role

The buffet setting Mrs. Waters has used in this picture shows the attractive accessories she has used in arranging her table. An Italian earthenware centerpiece with matching dishes, and flat silver by Georg Jensen in the cactus pattern, have been placed on a handwoven runner in violet and green shades, with corresponding napkins. The Argental hand-wrought aluminum food servicer, fitted with glass baking dishes, and meat platter with same type of metal top insures that hot food will be kept hot

Asparagus Rolls Recipe Is Winner

Miss Richter Gets $3 Prize for Novel And Savory Dish

MISS RICHTER

Press edges together and brush top with milk. Place on baking sheet. Bake in hot oven, 425 degrees, for 15 to 20 minutes. One 1-pound can of asparagus tips may be used if fresh asparagus is not available. Drain and boil liquid down to 1-3 cup. Serve with bacon sauce. Sauce—Melt 1½ tablespoons butter in double boiler. Add 2½ tablespoons flour and mix well. Add 1 cup milk and asparagus liquid gradually and cook, stirring constantly until thickened. Add ½ teaspoon salt and few grains pepper. Delicious Variations For Serving Popular Vegetable Offered

MRS. PHILLIPS

Asparagus Shortcake

$1 Prize

Mrs. Richard Reeves,
4105 Wisconsin avenue

Recipe: Wash 1 large bunch asparagus, about 24 stalks. Peel tough ends. Cut off tips and cut stalks in small pieces. Cook pieces and tips separately in boiling, salted water. Melt 4 tablespoons butter; add 6 tablespoons flour and mix well. Add 2 cups milk and ½ cup asparagus stalk, and cook, stirring constantly until thickened. Add 1 teaspoon salt, few grains pepper and asparagus pieces. Roll out biscuit dough and cut with doughnut cutter in 12 rounds. Bake in hot oven, 425 degrees, for 12 to 15 minutes. Put creamed pieces between the rounds and in centers. Dip asparagus tips in melted buttter and put in center of shortcakes. Serves 6.

Mrs. Waters' Baked-Bean Recipe

Buy oven-baked beans, the kind that comes with Boston brown bread. Put a layer of beans in a casserole, then a layer of brown sugar. Over this spread a layer of India relish, then a very thin layer of chili sauce. Repeat the procedure until enough has been prepared for the number of guests. Bake in oven for about 30 minutes.

For the salad ingredients Mrs. Waters uses lettuce or endive, celery, lobster or shrimp, or both, tomatoes, and celery, and over it serves French dressing. The ice cream cake is purchased on her way home the day of the supper. With the Boston brown bread steamed and plenty of hot coffee the menu is completed.

That Rolling Pin

The wooden rolling pin needs special care to keep it from warping. As soon as it has been used, rinse it in cold water, wash it quickly in warm soapy water, then rinse in hot water. Wipe dry and keep in a warm—not hot—place. Never soak wooden utensiles nor dry them directly over heat.

Flavor Plus Color

Cranberry Sherbet is a natural for a meat accompaniment, whether the meat is served hot or cold. Canned cranberry sauce can be used for making the sherbet.

Cranberry Sherbet

Crush 1 can cranberry sauce. Add the grated rind and juice of 1 lemon and the juice of 1 orange. Freeze partially, then fold in 2 stiffly beaten egg whites and continue freezing.

Thick Chops

Buy lamb chops for broiling from two-thirds to 2 inches thick. Lamb chops thinner than that will dry out entirely cooked.

A Circus Cake Will Delight Children After Big Show

Seven-Minute Icing and Design Of Unshelled Peanuts Will Make It The Delicious Climax to Perfect Day

By The Post Food Editor

WITH CIRCUS time already on the wing it is time to think of food for the children to have for their lunch before going to the performance or for supper after they return. Perhaps, some children may have a circus party to celebrate a birthday or otherwise entertain playmates.

Children will, of course, attend an afternoon performance and a supper for them could follow afterward.

A circus cake will delight the little ones and will be worth the effort to bake. The following is a recipe for a circus cake with seven-minute frosting.

Circus Cake

Combine 3 squares unsweetened chocolate with 2-3 cup of water in saucepan and add 4 tablespoons sugar. Cook over slow fire until thick and smooth, stirring constantly. Let stand until cold, stirring occasionally. Add 1 teaspoon vanilla. Sift cake flour once, measure to 2 cups, add 2 teaspoons baking powder, ½ teaspoon soda and ½ teaspoon salt and sift together 3 times. Cream 2-3 cup butter thoroughly, add 1¼ cups sugar gradually, and cream until light and fluffy. Add 3 well beaten eggs and beat after their addition, then add cold chocolate mixture and blend. Add flour alternately with 1-3 cup sour milk or buttermilk, a small amount at a time, beating after each addition until smooth. Turn into two oiled 9-inch layer pans. Bake in moderate oven, 350 degrees for 35 minutes. Place cake on round wooden serving board. Spread seven minute icing frosting between layers and on top and sides of cake. Arrange candy animals on top around base of cake. Sprinkle toasted cocoanut and arrange unshelled peanuts on serving board around cake.

Seven-Minute Frosting

Combine 2 unbeaten egg whites, 1½ cups sugar, 5 tablespoons water and 1½ teaspoons light corn sirup in top of double boiler, beating with rotary egg beater, and cook 7 minutes, or until frosting stands in peaks. Remove from boiling water; add 1 teaspoon vanilla and beat until thick enough to spread. Makes enough frosting to cover tops and sides of two 9-inch layers, or top and sides of 8 by 8 by 2-inch cake.

Clarifying Fat

Fat used for deep frying can be used over again if you clarify it thus: Add 2 slices of raw potatoes and heat slowly until the potatoes are a light brown color. Put the fat through a fine-meshed strainer or a cloth dipped in warm water and stretched over a bowl or can. This removes the sediment. Cool and store the fat, covered, in the refrigerator.

Elephants 'n' Everything at Circus Party

Back from a gala day at the circus, children talk of nothing else but the tricks of clowns and the trumpeting of the elephants. Such events do not come often in the year. However, the delectable and intriguing cake shown above, decorated with clowns, giraffes elephants,, monkeys and other animals, recaptures the spirit of the big event and makes the eating almost as thrilling as the circus itself

Process Keeps Vitamin B In White Bread

Crusade Indicated By Wives to Force New Milling Method

By Ida Jean Kain

THE AMERICAN diet has always been the best in the world—mainly because the American housewife has been adamant in her demands that valuable scientific dietary improvements be made available to her family. Now it looks as though she may be forced to crusade to put vitamin B into bread.

From what we can learn, the milling and baking companies are waiting to see whether the demand will justify use of the new milling process by which vitamin B is retained in white flour. The contention is made that anyone suffering from an actual deficiency can overcome it most quickly by taking the concentrates.

Bacteria Attracted

That is perfectly true. But why shouldn't our everyday diet prevent such a deficiency? One of the best food sources of vitamin B. is whole grain. But in white flour 90 per cent of the vitamin has been milled out! For years the best part of the wheat was thrown to the pigs. Since we have become vitamin conscious the wheat germ has been sold to the vitamin concentrate manufacturers.

However, there has been a good explanation of the failure to include wheat germ in flour. Wheat germ flour attracts bacteria—as one authority says, "bugs know what's good for them"—and it spoils quickly.

But with the new aeration process white flour can be milled so that it retains the wheat germ and does not spoil. By this method half a billion pounds of health insurance a year can be returned to the natural carrier, and made available to everyone, rich and poor alike.

What happens on a diet that is actually deficient in vitamin B? In a laboratory experiment the little white rats that were restricted to white flour died in two months! Those fed on wheat germ flour grew chincilla coats and lived to be great ancestors.

Foreigners Interested

And here is what happens to people on a B deficient diet: Extreme nervousness, irritability, indigestion, constipation, lack of energy. Vitamin B is necessary to the liberation of energy to its full extent.

Foreign governments regard the new American discovery as so important that emissaries have already been sent to investigate it. Some of them have gone so far as to make the process mandatory upon millers and bakers.

But it looks as if it is up to the housewife over here to raise the standard of diet. If she demands white bread with vitamin B, the bakers and millers will put it there.

Molded Tuna Salad Has Great Appeal

Supper's back in style. Spring has brought back to family favor this lighter type of meal. One hot dish—say soup—and a big bowl or mold of salad. Add some delicious hot bread, an easy dessert and a pot of coffee and the supper bell is ready to ring.

Molded Tuna Fish Salad

Soak 2 teaspoons gelatine in ½ cup cold water. Dissolve it by placing it over hot water. Cool and combine it with ¾ cup mayonnaise, a dash of salt, paprika and 1 tablespoon vinegar. Chill the mixture. When it is about to set fold into it 1 cup flaked tuna fish, 1 cup chopped celery, ½ cup chopped olives and 2 tablespoons pimento. Place the salad in a wet mold. Chill until firm.

Gingham and Calico Girls Lead the Field

Cotton Clothes Developed for All Occasions, Even Weddings

By Marshall Adams
The Post Fashion Editor

GINGHAM and calico girls will pop up without the slightest provocation in another month or so and they won't be quaint characters from fiction either. They will be very much flesh and blood women dressed to the teeth in pinafores, aprons and candy-cane cottons. Even the June bride will look like Kate Greenaway rather than the traditional "picture out of Vogue."

Marshall Adams

All this picturesqueness was brought to life as a result of the Washington visit of lively Mary Nell Porter, brunette debutante from Memphis, who was the National Cotton Council's choice for this year's cotton queen. Every year this cotton organization combs the deep South for a beauty who can wear clothes well—that is, provided they are made of fabrics direct from the cotton boll. Mary Nell happend to be queen with both charm and the ability to show off the most humble of cottons with charm.

Easy on Budget

That cottons will be versatile this summer could hardly be doubted when this "Cotton Maid" promenaded at a recent fashion parade, showing a complete business girl's cotton wardrobe. This included an office suit, a play suit, a tailored town or country suit, a daytime frock, a printed muslin evening gown and a two-piece bathing costume. Her clothes, aside from being easy on the budget, guaranteed washable, and easy to keep fresh and dainty, had another feature of interest. They had all been personally designed by Mary Lewis, noted merchandiser, stylist and intrepreneur of the fashion world.

Cotton Wedding

Aside from Mary Nell's captivating Tennessee smile and cotton wardrobe, there was plenty of interest in the advance summer fashions seen at the Maid of Cotton showing. A wedding done entirely in cotton featured spotless white organdy for the bride and sturdy old seersucker, newly demure and sprigged in rose, blue and green nosegays for the bridesmaids' gowns. The modest square necklines ending in embroidered batiste ruffles produced an undeniable Kate Greeneway effect.

Other story-book touches were seen in the pinafores and apron frocks of polka dotted percale and checked calico. There were playful bathing suits made of gay gingham, sun and shrink-proof and with lastex waistbands cut low in the suits to give that longer torso look. Final proof of the 57 varieties of cotton took the form of millinery, in a maze of crisp white pique hats with ric-rac bordered brims and broad natural linen cartwheels trimmed with cotton frou-frou.

Marital Mystery

If it pays to be good and a model wife,
Then why on earth does it chance to be,
That you never once, throughout your life,
Read of an "unattractive divorcee?"

Today's Social Notes

(From the Truthtown Torch)

The benefit for the Norwegian war victims, planned for next Friday and sponsored by Mrs. Rufus Van Tinsel and Mrs. Ethelbert Sappington, has been indefinitely postponed. Mrs. Van Tinsel and Mrs. Sappington decided suddenly they should leave at once to see the famous North Carolina gardens now in bloom. On their return, they will continue plans for the benefit, provided Norway by that time is not entirely in the hands of the Nazis.

Greener Pastures

The engagement of Mrs. Smythe Steppit and Livingston DeCrasher, bachelor, gourmet, bon vivant, Beau Brummel, art connoisseur, etching collector and man about town, has been terminated, the Torch learned yesterday.

Mrs. Steppit, who obtained a divorce several months ago, in Reno, from Marcus M. (Doodle) Steppit, heir of the canape tycoon, was awarded alimony of $1,500,000. Mr. DeCrasher is now reported to be giving a rush to Mrs. Jones Bingle, who returned last week from Reno, where she obtained a divorce from Ezekiel Bingle, octogenarian millionaire who made a fortune in the manufacture of lamb chop panties. Mrs. Bingle was awarded alimony of $1,750,000.

Charity Ltd.

Miss Eloise (Snooksy) Gilderlyly, glamorous sub-deb, will not model in the Spring Fashion Pagent, to be held next week at the Hotel Arabesque.

Miss Gilderlyly's mother, Mrs. S. Edgerton Gilderlyly, feels that the charities to benefit from the performance are not sufficiently "conservative" to warrant her daughter's appearance in the affair. "A young girl with her social future before her cannot be too careful in her associations," said Mrs. Gilderlyly. "Now, while I recognize that a very meritorious work is being done by the Home for the White Collar Aged (one of the charities to benefit from the pageant, yet I do not feel that this organization has really representative women on its board. Moreover, my daughter has not yet been presented to society, and it might not look well for her to come before the public in this manner."

The sponsors of the fashion pageant, while lamenting the loss of Miss Gilderlyly, who has been voted in a Yale poll as having the best underpinnings of the 1941 debutante crop, yet are heartened by the cooperation of other social leaders, among them Mrs. Lambert Percheron, who has consented to model a sequin bathing suit.

Suburban Notes

Mr. and Mrs. J. Clifton Clymer have just moved into their unusual new home in the ritzy Geranium Heights subdivision. Their home, a modernistic bungalow, is built entirely on wheels. This will enable the Clymers to keep up with all the fashionable moving trends in the suburban neighborhoods.

For example, if next spring the Clymers find all their friends moving into a newer and more exclusive neighborhood (such as Dahlia Gardens or Orchid Place, now being developed) they can follow immediately in their wheel house—in fact may even be able to get there first. Or if they find that any desirable "ordinary" families are moving into Geranium Heights they can flee the subdivision without delya.

In order to avoid ever being caught in the "wrong" neighborhood, the Clymers will lease grounds for their wheel bungalow for only six-month periods.

Glimpsed yesterday—Mrs. Reginald Pelf and Mrs. Archibald Wadd trying to avoid each other's eye in a $2 hat shop; Mrs. Mark Stepp in a silver fox chubby pushing a wire basket perambulator in a chain grocery; Mrs. Napoleon March buttonholding Mrs. Zenith Zither in a lending library and demanding that she join the Higher Life League; young Bobby Bounce ringing doorbells to sell subscriptions to a magazine; young Hank Hopper ringing doorbells to sell tickets to an amateur circus; Sis Perky ringing doorbells to sell tickets to a church dinner; Jackie Bingo ringing doorbells to solicit old newspapers; Dorothy Dudd ringing doorbells to sell garden seed, etc. . . . etc . . .

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes

New York, April 18.

USUALLY IT is the privilege of the males to scream and yell about the absurdity of our headgear, and they must be as bored as we are with this worn-out college yell. Our little Mayor La Guardia is its keynoter here. But I must admit that a stroll along the avenue, in the April sunshine, is enough to cause even me, the milliners' pal, to let off a yelp.

ALICE HUGHES

No one demands sanity in such matters. And I don't find that in 1 of 100 hats on our better highways this spring. Then there's utility, for some hats must serve a real social business purpose, which few of us ever consider. My friend, Fleur Pettingell, pretty young executive of the ad agency she runs with her handsome husband, is much distressed by the state of hattery as affects herself. Fleur is pretty enough to wear toppers designed for the better grade of post-debutante. But she is also an ardent businesswoman with important clients to meet, and to whom she must sell a bill of goods for the dear old firm.

If she were keeping a social date, any man would enjoy seeing her wearing one of the current pots of hyacinth on her head—but a prospective client would think her just another bit of today's fluff, and be confident that he could hoodwink her at will. She could get sporting sailors to make her resemble a member of the ridin', huntin' set from Long Island. But she can find no hat that makes her attractive, and still gives a busy man confident of her mature judgment and her anxiety to handle his business competently. This is a challenge to milliners, all right.

Girl's Parents Disparage Man of Her Choice; Predict She Will Have to Support Him; She Asks Advice

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have been going with a young man for almost two years. I love him dearly and he loves me just as much. We are practically engaged, but we don't expect to marry for at least two more years, as we want to save some money first and he wants to get better established in his job, which is very promising. He is a bookkeeper, and I am employed too.

This is my problem: My parents don't like him and they don't want me to marry him or even go out with him, because they say, "he will turn out to be just like his father." His father doesn't work; or, at least, he has no business of his own and he doesn't make money. They say his son will take after him, and that if we marry, I will have to support him. He knows how they feel and what they say, and it makes him angry. He says he will always have a job and what's more, he will always support me. But of course, I want to work after we marry—at least for a while—so that we can get off to a good start.

My parents also complain that he wants everything his way; that I never get my way. But that isn't true, as we often compromise on things. Sometimes he does things my way and sometimes he doesn't; and vice versa. For another thing, mother says it's not right for me to go to his house and visit. She says it looks as if I am running after him. I don't go to his house very often, because I don't like to quarrel with mother about it; but he comes to my house on an average of four times a week. I think it's all right to visit his home once in a while, because, after all, we do love each other, as our two families know very well.

I have tried to have heart-to-heart talks with my mother about our plans, but she will not see my side and as a result we quarrel. I see her viewpoint and I know she means it for my good. But must I give up this boy I love, just because his father doesn't make much money? Do you think he will follow in his father's footsteps? I know that he gives his mother a certain amount of his salary every week. Please advise me what to do. E. P. D.

'Like Father, Like Son,' Is Not Infallible Rule

DEAR E. P. D.: Apparently your parents believe in the infallibility of the old saying, "Like father, like son." But as you optimistically remark, children of ne'er-do-well parents sometimes do take profit from their elders' poor example, by charting a more productive course. Certain proud and sensitive souls who have been humiliated or handicapped in youth by their parents' fumbling failure to "make the grade," often feel a greater urge to compel society's respect by their own performance, than does the child who was born to the silver spoon.

In my opinion, your parents are being unfair in condemning this boy without a hearing, simply on the basis of his father's performance. What about his mother? If she has held the home together—despite the handicap of a shiftless husband—and reared a son whose sense of responsibility prompts him to share his weekly earnings with her, she must be a woman of considerable character. It should occur to them that maybe the boy "takes after" her.

I suppose your parents are greatly ambitious for you, as many parents are. They want you to start your adult life where theirs leaves off. They want you to "go further" in life than they managed to; and they had expected you to get your running start by marrying "well;" which is to say, by marrying a young man whose "future," so-called, is absolutely ticketed for "success." They did not bring you up to marry a struggling youngster whose chances of entering the Hall of Fame look slim indeed. And so they are dead against your unpretentious fiance—not so much because of what he is (in terms of character); as because of what he is not (in terms of cash success).

I hold their attitude to be ungenerous, in disparaging the boy because of his father; when obviously he is doing everything in his power to hold up his end of things; and doing it not at all badly, in view of today's unemployed millions and the concomitant bitter competition for jobs.

However, it is not for me to say—on the basis of the sketchy information provided—whether you would be fully justified in remaining obstinately loyal to him. If you are old enough to marry, you should have sufficient common sense to know whether your beloved is Grade A husband material, or whether he is simply the man you want, despite his shortcomings.

In the latter event, the further consideration arises as to whether you have the stamina to take a gamble and stand up under the possible disappointment that might ensue. And supposing you do marry him, and he turns out to be a dependable, adequately "providing" mate, there is still the possibility that your parents' bitter disapproval of him would insidiously corrode your marital relationship.

Instinctively affronted by their hostility, he would be likely to take the position, after marriage, that either you are "all for him"—to the extent of resenting their unfriendliness as much as he does—or, you are "letting him down," by running back and forth between the two camps, trying to effect some sort of reconciliation. So, it's up to you to decide whether you want to get in the middle of such a tug-o'-war.

Since you are informally engaged to the young man, I cannot sustain your mother's objection to your visiting his home occasionally. I think it derives more from churlishness than from Emily Post. There is nothing "bad form" about such a practice, under the circumstances; and it is a bit ridiculous to speak of a girl's "running after" a man who has already asked her to marry him.

New Ensemble Simplifies Make-up

Rouge, lipstick and nail polishes are the accessories or finishing touches of a beautiful complexion—not the foundation. But they are so important that they can either enhance or mar the whole appearance, according to Miss Jane Hillyer Hunt, representative of a famous New York beauty salon, who is at one of the local stores this week to advise women on beauty problems and spring make-up trends.

"Colored nail polishes have become so popular that you have to be very careful about the shade you wear," said Miss Hunt. "Nothing is more discordant than the spectacle of orangy red lips holding forth against rosy-pink fingernails. If you don't carefully harmonize all your make-up items, you're apt to throw your total appearance out of kilter."

To simplify your make-up matching problems, the New York salon has styled a clever new ensemble called "Cosmetic Color Cue." This contains lipstick, matching or harmonizing nail polish and related face powder. The lipstick sets the color cue. Great leeway is given in the choice of powder so that women with varying shades of complexions can find the tone that blends best with the skin as well as cosmetic shades.

Society Has Colossal Fashion Show, Likes of Which City Hasn't Seen Lately

Hundreds of City's Most Prominent Women Turn Out as Lilies Display Their Gilt For Benefit of Needy Cases in Hospitals

By Hope Ridings Miller

DEFINITELY THE MOST fashionable fashion show in Washington in many a season—and I'm talking about the audience as usual—was the one yesterday following the mammoth luncheon in the Blue Room of the Shoreham Hotel. Topflight Capitalites turned out by the dozens, nay, the hundreds, to see the lily gilded in all its glory—all for the sake of sweet charity.

Hope Ridings Miller

Arranged for the benefit of needy cases in District hospitals, the event brought shoals of notables, trimly turned out in flossy finery that vied with frocks and hats displayed on the stage. In fact, if I had my choice, I'd just as soon own that snappy gray suit and white hat with red accents worn yesterday by Mrs. Warren Barbour as anything I saw in the show. Mrs. Robert Grosjean's pale blue faille ensemble with its matching hat and beige fox collar was also something to write home about; as were any number of other outfits seen in the crowd.

Something new in Washington fashion show audiences was the number of men on hand yesterday. I spotted at least four tables set aside exclusively for the male contingent, and several men were at other tables.

To say that the event was a success is putting it mildly. Socially, it was colossal. I haven't seen as many prominent women collected under one roof all winter. Truth is, I might as well try to compress a social register, a Congressional directory and a diplomatic blue book into the narrow confines of one column . . . as to try to tell you who ALL came to see the show.

MEMBERS OF the organizing committee can sit down, hands folded today, and know they put across something of which the town hasn't seen the likes in many a moon. And I'm still talking about the audience.

Busily buzzing abut, seeing to last-minute ticket-selling, and what not, where members of the committee, which included Mrs. Grosjean, Mrs. James Reid, Mrs. Lewis Clarke—who did a swell job of announcing—Miss Bambie McKenna, Mrs. Harold De Veau and Mrs. Stanley Richardson. Miss Nancy Ordway announced for the second half of the show.

Mrs. Millard Tydings, chairman of patronesses, entertained a large company of guests, including several wives of Senators. Mrs. Aldace Walker, who also had a table of guests, spent part of her time modeling; as did Miss Angelica Lloyd, chairman of models. Miss Patricia Prochnik, debutante chairman, was here, there, and everywhere selling flowers, as was Miss Anne Sperry.

SOME OF WASHINGTON'S most attractive matrons and maids were called to the colors as mannequins. Dresses, hats and furs were brought down from New York, but I must say, if I'm shot for it, that I've seen a good many just as pretty in any number of Washington shops. Hair-dos and make-up were designed and executed by Mme. Russina, of Washington, and everybody in the show looked glamorous enough to get to Hollywood any day in the week.

"Gilding the Lily for Glamorous Nights and Playful Days" was the theme of the show that got under way shortly before 2 p. m., and lasted a couple of hours. Models included Mrs. Claude Pepper, Mrs. A. B. Chandler, Mrs. William D. Byron, Countess Guy Baillet Latour, Mrs. Lawrence Wood Robert, Mrs. Samuel Connor, Mrs. Edward Page, Miss Patricia Hill, Mrs. Scudder Doeg, Mrs. Charles Lipscomb, Mrs. Lawrence Wood Robert, Mrs. William T. Mann, Miss Betty Beale, Mrs. Stanley Richardson, Miss Emily Davis, Miss Ruth Overton, Miss Joan McKenna, Miss Yolande Alfaro, Miss Edith Pearson, Miss Rosemary Merrill, Miss Bambie McKenna, Mrs. James Reid, Mrs. Harold De Veau, Mrs. Paul Fox and Mrs. Grosjean.

IF YOU WOULD HAVE more "names"—among those I saw in the audience were Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, who was at a table with a large party, including Mrs. Emlen Knight Davies, Mrs. Jesse Jones, Senora de Boyd, Mrs. Gilbert Hitchcock and Mrs. Edwin T. Meredith.

Mrs. William O. Douglas was seen finding her way to a table, as was Mrs. Clarence Norton Goodwin, who had with her a number of guests, including Mrs. Robert H. Jackson, Mrs. Charles Lea and Mrs. Harold Sims. Countess van der Straten-Ponthoz was glimpsed in the crowd, as were Mrs. Edward Finkenstaedt, Mrs. Patrick Hurley, Mrs. Warren Austin, the Misses Ida and Pauletta Guffey, Mrs. Arthur H. Vandenberg, Mrs. D. Worth Clark, Mrs. John J. Dempsey, Mrs. A. S. Monroney, Mrs. Harold Walker, who had a number of guests with her; Mrs. George T. Marye, Mrs. Ralph Worthington, Mrs. George Pettengile, Mrs. Bruce Smith and Mrs. Merle Thorpe.

I heard that Senator Styles Bridges, Presidential aspirant, was on hand for the show, but I did not see him. Among those I did see, however, were Commander Richard Tuggle, Aldace Walker, Fred Roy, Gray Foster, Edward Page, George Abell, Charles Lipscomb, William Fitzgerald, George Williams and Robert Grosjeans.

ADDENDA: The rumor that the Minister of Finland recently stopped by a beauty salon to see his bride while she was having her hair done turned out to be true. But—the "bracelet" he was supposed to have given her wasn't that at all. It was a couple of gardenias purchased on the spur of the moment. There is a story about the Minister and a bracelet, but it doesn't concern Mme. Procope and he didn't give it. Instead, it was given to him . . . to help Finland. But I'll tell you all about it some other time.

The marriage took place at 10 o'clock in the morning at St. Mary's Star of the Sea Church in Baltimore, with the Msgr. Albert E. Smith officiating. Present in the sanctuary were the Rev. James Gleason, C. M., of Philadelphia; the Rev. George C. Bohlman, S. J., of this city; the Rev. John J. Callaghan, of this city; the Rev. Charles Trainor, of Baltimore, and the Rev. Francis Connell, of Baltimore.

Given in marriage oy her brother, William McLaughlin, the bride wore a pale pink chiffon gown made on Grecian lines. A shoulder-length pink veil fell from her matching tricorn hat. She carried a prayer book with showers of lily of the valley. Miss Marie McLaughlin, sister of the bride, was maid of honor and her only attendant. She wore an Alice-blue gown fashioned on lines similar to the bride's gown and a small blue flower hat with matching veil. She carried pink roses and snapdragons.

James J. Breen, of Wilmette, Ill., brother of the bridegroom, and best man. Ushers were Gibbons McLaughlin, of Baltimore; Dennis McLaughlin, of Detroit, brothers of the bride; John M. Breen, brother of the bridegroom, and Ar-Arthur E. Raeburn, of this city.

There was a reception at the home of the bride after the ceremony.

CAPITAL WHIRL

By SALLY SWIFT

AFTER A DRIVE through the country on a misty night the drawing-room at Cornwell, the Virginia home of the Robert Pells, was a cheering sight. Branches of fruit blossoms and spring flowers were everywhere, a fire crackled on the hearth, and a tiny piano had been installed in one corner particularly for the occasion.

In the dining room, displayed in various cabinets against a pale green background, is the Pells' superb set of Canton china. By a trick of fate, the Canton service is complete, from huge covered tureens to small plates. A Pell ancestor, who owned clipper ships plying out of Newport, ordered the china from Canton as a gift to his bride. To the sea captain who did the errand, he gave his seal ring with orders to have the coat of arms copied on each piece of the service.

WHEN THE BRIDE'S GIFT arrived from China the coat of arms was found to have been copied literally. The whole design was backward, just as it had been on the seal of the ring. Mr. Pell's ancestor, in deep disgust, had the whole lot packed off to the attic, which accounts for its perfect state of preservation several generations later.

Among the guests dining with the Pells the other night were Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Cotton, she very smart in white crepe with a wide scarlet girdle and matching jacket. Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Rumbold, Mrs. Rumbold wearing a becoming black and pink print, Miss Laura Tuckerman in ice blue satin, Mrs. Audry Appleby, of New York, the Pells' house guest, in mauve lace, and Count and Countess van Rechteren Limpurg, the latter in black with a white organdy ruff. The very pleasant bachelors were Sherlock Davis and Llewellyn Thompson.

ANOTHER ATTRACTIVE dinner party of the week was given by Mrs. Daniel C. Stapleton and her daughter, Stellita. Mrs. Stapleton was gracious and distinguished in pale gray with a scarf of white lace about her shoulders. The Dabney Thompsons, both dark and good-looking, were beign introduced to her friends by Stellita. The Thompsons are from Cincinnati and have come to Washington so that Mr. Thompson can work at the headquarters for Senator Taft's Presidential campaign.

Also dining with the Stapletons were Baron and Baroness Baeyens, of the French Embassy; Mary Baeyens, wearing a Paris frock of pale blue chiffon; Heathcoat Amory, of the British Embassy, and the Honorable Mrs. Amory; Peggy Wagner in sheer black with pink cobweb lace; Jacques de Thier, John Foster and Ogden Hammond, jr.

The reason British diplomats occasionally turn up at white-tie functions in black ties is that during the war they wear formal dress only to White House receptions or to something equally official.

Super-Social Week-End Is in Store, Revolving Around the Fahnestocks' Dance

LAST WEEK-END here was tremendously political, when over a dozen Presidential candidates converged on the Capital from all over the country. This one promises to be supersocial, as entertaining revolves about visitors arriving for Mr. and Mrs. Snowden Fahnestocks' dance tomorrow night.

EVERY THIRD WOMAN this spring is wearing one of those cunning little turbans made entirely of pastel colored flowers. One friend of ours, however, has decided to discard hers because of a recent macaber experience.

The other day she entered a church for a funeral, wearing the gay turban, which she discreetly parked in the vestry to change into a darker, more suitable hat. She intended to switch back again following the obsequies.

A few minutes later, as she stood in her pew, she thought there was something rather familiar about one of the mounds of flowers piled on the coffin. Looking closer, she saw that it was her hat!

COMMANDER and Mrs. Pierre Benech, of the French Embassy, gave a small cocktail party yesterday at their home in Georgetown. One of their two little daughters made her appearance, but seemed to be a bit shy.

Among the guests were Admiral John Towers, Chief of Aeronautics of the Navy, and Mrs. Towers, who is French, and Mr. and Mrs. Russell Sard. Mrs. Sard wore a small white turban with her black dress. There were several members of the embassy staff present, among them Baron James Baeyens, M. and Mme. Charles Lucet, the latter wearing a blue wool suit; M. and Mme. Dalpaiz.

ALSO PRESENT was the Counselor of the Mexican Embassy, Dr. Quintanilla. He was on his way to George Washington University to award prizes to his French class. He is half French, spent many years in Paris and conducts French courses in the university.

Mrs. Roosevelt Urges Campaign on Syphilis

By Jessie Ash Arndt
The Post Club Editor.

We can't afford to be prudish about really important things, Mrs. Roosevelt declared yesterday in a talk to members of the Seventy-fifth Club on the necessity for adequate measures for combatting syphilis in this country.

The First Lady, guest of honor at the club's annual luncheon on the roof of the Washington Hotel, said she had been requested to discuss the subject and warned against closing our eyes to conditions because they are disagreeable. The tendency to do this, instead of looking facts in the face and seeking the remedy, she termed "the greatest menace to the Nation today."

"Sometimes I think all of us are inclined to gloss over things and use pretty words instead of those which express our meaning," she said. "To deal with things straight out, if they can be remedied, is morally less harmful than are veiled allusions."

Mrs. Bruce Gould, who was here to testify before Congress urging the appropriation for the campaign against syphilis, told of the changed attitude toward open discussion of the situation, said Mrs. Roosevelt. Mrs. Gould cited the experience of a leading women's magazine which expected an avalanche of condemnation after printing two frank articles on the subject. Instead, letters began to come in from all sections, commending the policy of bringing into the open a situation which threatened to become an increasing menace because of reluctance to discuss it.

"We do know there is a cure," said Mrs. Roosevelt. "What we don't know is the facilities for treatment in each community."

She urged club members, all wives of members of Congress who came in with the Seventy-fifth session, to investigate facilities in their own cities. In the District, she said, the clinics are so crowded they cannot possibly take care of all the people who apply for treatment. Elsewhere, too, even though clinics are established, they are frequently inadequate to meet the need. It is also important, she said, that they be located in areas from which most of the patients come, and be open after work hours.

The program for which a $7,000,000 appropriation is being asked, will have three main objectives said Mrs. Roosevelt. The first will be to provide facilities for all, regardless of ability to pay. The second will be to seek out those afflicted and place them under treatment in the early stages of the disease, and the third the educational work, reaching all kinds of organizations.

"It is safeguarding the future, young people and society as a whole," said Mrs. Roosevelt.

She also urged the importance of proper sanitary facilities in backward communities in which roads and other improvements are being given attention first, although sanitation is of primary importance.

Mrs. Roosevelt was introduced by Mrs. Wade Kitchens, of Arkansas, president of the club. She wore a black dress with a narrow vest of red and a black straw hat the broad brim of which swept up from her face on the left side. Mrs. Kitchens wore a chartreuse frock with a brown print jacket and a natural color straw hat, trimmed with two wings, matching her dress. Among the honor guests, also seated at the head table with the club officers, were Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, Mme. Pastoriza, wife of the Minister of the Dominican Republic, Mrs. Morris Sheppard, Mrs. Lister Hill and Mrs. Allen Ellender.

Wallerstein Suggests City Manager Here

Women Voters League Hears Explanation Of Government Needs

The city manager plan of municipal government with an elected city council was recommended by Morton L. Wallerstein, executive director of the League of Virginia Municipalities, yesterday in a talk before the Department or Government and Its Operation of the League of Women Voters. He addressed an open luncheon meeting at the Y. W. C. A. at which the department chairman, Mrs. Joseph Low, presided.

After a general discussion of the city manager plan, Mr. Wallerstein explained how it would be applicable to the District, and said there would be no real obstacles to prevent its adoption here.

He also discussed the Griffenhagen report which, he said, expressly disavows that it is concerned either with financing the District or selecting the governing body, apparently taking the view this is not required under the Congressional legislation on which the report is based. However, the report recommends the commission be enlarged from five to seven men appointed by the President in order to give recognition of different points of view in the District.

Way to Get Program Through D. C. Vote

Mr. Wallerstein declared that if such recognition were required, the way to get it would be through an election by the District voters.

He termed a "real step forward" the report's recommendation for a District administrator appointed by the commission. It would be more appropriate, in line with the connotation contained in the accepted term "city manager" that such an executive conform with the pattern in government by being called that or at least "District" manager.

The District could be well operated with a maximum of eight departments instead of the 17 recommended, he said. He listed these as public safety, public utilities, public works, welfare, law, finance, personnel administration and education.

While he said the Griffenhagen report, in the main, was sound, he pointed out two weaknesses. It omits, under its construction of the Congressional Act, any recommendation as to mode of electing the governing body.

17 Departments Held Entirely Too Many

The second weakness, he said, was the 17 different departments. Even in a city such as Washington they are too many because they will tend to diffuse responsibility and lessen the probability of coordination between the different departments, he said.

The Seal bill would improve over the Griffenhagen report, in is opinion, because of its provision for 12 rather than 17 departments but he critized the council provision and called the bill a smoke screen to satisfy those who demand government by the local people and the city manager plan. The former can be secured only by election and the latter only by appointment by those elected, he said.

Entertain Maine D. A. R.

Representative and Mrs. Ralph O. Brewster, of Maine, were hosts yesterday at the House restaurant to the visiting delegates of the D. A. R. in Washington for their annual deliberations. The luncheon was held in the Speaker's dining room and the long table seating 40 was bright with spring flowers. The guests were headed by Mrs. Fred Morgan, State regent, of Saco, Me., and Miss Margaret McIlroy, of Lewiston, incoming State regent.

Penwomen Open Meeting Here Monday

Writers, composers and artists from all parts of the country are gathering in Washington today for the biennial convention of the National League of American Pen Women at the Willard Hotel.

Formal opening of the business sessions Monday will be preceded by several social affairs, including the authors' breakfast tomorrow noon; a reception given by the District branch at its Grafton Hotel studio in the evening, and Sunday afternoon the president's reception at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Meyer, on Crescent place.

This year being marked by a "presidential election" for the league, brings politics to the fore. Mrs. Edna Knight Gasch, of this city, and Mrs. Mae West Owen, of Denver, who has spent much time here this winter, are the two candidates for the presidency to succeed Audrey Wurdemann (Mrs. Joseph Auslander), who has served for the past two years. Both have received indorsements from chapters in different sections of the country, and the election Thursday will hold the spotlight so far as convention business is concerned.

The presentation of men (instead of women) speakers will be an innovation at the authors' breakfast tomorrow. Among them will be Joseph Quincy Adams, director of Folger Library; John Vance, of the Library of Congress; Hugh Findlay, of Columbia University, and Harlan Miller, columnist of The Post. A man also will be among the musicians present. He is Michael Werboff, barytone, of New York who is a portrait painter.

Mrs. Elizabeth Merz Butterfield, national music chairman, also will present three composers, Clara Edwards, Mary Marianne Genet, of Wilkinsburg, Pa., and Pearl Adams, of West Palm Beach, Fla. Mrs. Arthur J. Seaton will present Madeleine Lazzard, the dancer.

Local Woodmen Circle Convention Hostess

Local Woodmen Circle members will be hostesses at a district convention of the society at the Pythian Hall, 1012 Ninth street, today, when delegates will be present from Hughesville, Baltimore, Sparrow Point, Essex, Capitol Heights, and Forestville, Md.

Honor guests and speakers will be Mrs. Pauline Rohrs, national representative and State manager, Mrs. Ruth Drish, State vice president, Mrs. Caroline Genther, State secretary, Mrs. Fannye Kolb, State past president, Mrs. Catherine Shughrue, State treasurer, Mrs. Eileen Bruno, State reporter and district outer sentinel.

Mrs. Odessa Bishoff, State president, Oakland, Md.; Mrs. Nora Mosser, State musician, and Mrs. Anna Thrasher, State auditor, Deer Park, Md., will attend.

Businessmen Oppose Gas Tax Boost

Federation Also Fights Further Restrictions on M Street Parking

The Federation of Business Men's Association last night expressed opposition to a proposed 1-cent increase in the gasoline tax and urged that no further parking restrictions be placed on M street in Georgetown.

Action on a resolution to support a bill cutting the number of taxicabs to 2,500 was delayed after a heated debate. The federation also refused to act on a resolution opposing construction of a gas station on the former site of the Greyhound Bus Terminal on New York avenue, between Fourteenth and Fifteenth streets northwest.

Meeting in the Continental Hotel, the federation unanimously adopted a resolution indorsing Max Tendler, Washington attorney, for the vacant seat on the Police Court bench.

Opponents of the bill to regulate taxicabs argued that it is unfair to put men out of business, even if that business is only operating a cab. They pointed out that cost to the District for relief would probably rise if hackers were deprived of an opportunity to earn a living.

The resolution was referred to the Public Utilities Commission for further consideration. Both the taxicab bill and the bill to increase the gas levy were introduced by Representative Randolph (Democrat), of West Virginia, chairman of the House District Committee.

Action opposing further parking restrictions on M street was taken at the recommendation of the Georgetown Association. Previously the Arlington County Civic Federation urged the traffic director to prevent parking on the south side of M street in the morning rush hour and on the north side in the evening.

The federation admitted the Washington Hardware Merchants Association to membership.

Business Club

Members of the American Business Club dispensed with business at their monthly meeting in the Hamilton Hotel last night, and instead dedicated the program to social entertainment.

A group of 30 members of the club and their wives attended an early buffet supper in the hotel and adjourned in time to attend the circus.

Central Northwest

The Central Northwest Citizens' Association has called upon "constituted authorities" to investigate an explosion that damaged a home at 1324 Harvard street northwest April 12, it was announced yesterday.

A resolution, prefaced by excerpts from the Declaration of Independence, denounced the alleged dynamiting as a "monster of un-Americanism," pledged full cooperation of the unit with authorities in ridding the city of those responsible for the act.

Nudists Added To D C. Zoo—They're Birds

The National Zoological Park collection was increased yesterday by two nudist birds and a leap year suitress (if there is no such word, substitute female suitor) for the hand of Saddleback Sambo.

Audubon himself never heard of the nudist bird, which is quite as it should be, since there isn't any such animal. But that is what zoo keepers called the two birds of paradise on their arrival because they'd lost their beautiful feathers during the long and trying sea trip from Batavia, Java.

Placed on display yesterday, the birds—one is a sickle-billed bird of paradise and the other a six-plumed b. of p.—were as bare as a cue ball but keepers were confident nature will take care of that deficiency speedily.

As for Sambo's new mate—Sambo is a saddleback tapir which came here two and a half years ago—she is intended as a replacement, the male having lost his mate some time ago.

The tapir, which is a perissodactyl ungulate, is about as unhandsome as the technical name would imply but keepers, sniffing the romantic spring air, yesterday foresaw the blossoming of a beautiful romance between Saddleback Sambo and his new mate.

The honeymooners have set up housekeeping in the pachyderm house, where they are on exhibition daily.

Capital News In Brief

Father and Son Held

A father and son who, police said, refused to be dismayed by the failure of their music box business were under arrest last night charged with grand larceny.

According to the charge, the pair were in the business of renting electric phonographs until they failed several months ago. But, police added, they continued to visit restaurants and beer parlors where the machines were installed, removed them "for repairs" and sold them in Norfolk, Va., until seven had thus been disposed of.

Police reported four music boxes have been recovered in Norfolk and two located here.

Canned Goods Stolen

Thieves broke into the storeroom of Catholic University, Fourth street and Michigan avenue northeast, last night and provisioned themselves with canned goods valued at $92, police reported.

Sister Alice, of Graduates Hall, said five cases of canned apples, nine cases of canned cherries and six tins of canned tuna flakes were stolen.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Kurt Hetzel conducts the Treasury Department Orchestra Thursday night in the Commerce Department Auditorium, with Charles Trowbridge Tittmann as soloist. Program: Overture to "Raymond" (Thomas), "Song Without Words" (Chaikovski), Hungarian Dance No. 6 (Brahms), "In diesen heiligen Hallen" (Mozart), "Kamenoi-Ostrov" No. 22 (Rubinstein), "An der schoenen blauen Donau" (Strauss), "Ballet Egyptian" (Luigini).

Under the direction of Kurt Hetzel, who is by way of becoming the foster-father of amateur organizations, the Treasury Department Orchestra gave its spring concert last evening in the Commerce Department Auditorium. While this band of 70 instrumentalists has been active for several seasons, it has not invited the notice of the public beyond the circle of its friends. On this occasion it made a bid for attention by engaging a roomy hall and presenting as soloist Charles Trowbridge Tittmann, who sang with admirable sonority and artistic finish Mozart's impressive aria for basso, "In diesen heiligen Hallen," and, for good measure, the traditional chant of the barge-haulers along the Volga River.

BROWN

The orchestra opened its program with a spirited performance of the overture which is practically all that has survived from Ambroise Thomas' opera, "Raymond." Spirit is the orchestra's most laudable trait at present, and it is quite evident that the musicians heartily enjoy their collaborative study of scores. There was zestful animation also in the readings of Chaikovski's F major "Chant sans Paroles" and the sixth Hungarian dance by Brahms.

How surprising it would be if one saw on a concert program "Kamenoi-Ostrov" and then heard in succession the 24 musical portraits which constitute Anton Rubinstein's opus 10. The one presented last night was the usual No. 22 which goes about the world with the more pretentious title of "Reve Angelique." Its companions in the latter half of the concert were the "Blue Danube" waltz of Johann Strauss and Luigini's "Ballett Egyptien."

Alexander Sklarevski plays a piano recital in the Washington Hotel Hall of Nations. Program: Rondo in A minor (Mozart), Sonata in D major, Op. 10, No. 3 (Beethoven), "Etudes Symphoniques" (Schumann), Prelude in A minor (Arenski), Waltz in F sharp major (Lyadov), Three Preludes (Skyrabin), "L'Isle Joyeause" (Debussy), Ballade in F major, Mazurek in C sharp minor, Waltz in E flat major, Etude in E minor, Polonaise in A flat major (Chopin).

Whenever Alexander Sklarevski comes over from Baltimore to give a recital he is sure of a cordial welcome from his admirers and friends, as well as from the friends of his numerous pupils who are exemplifying his precepts in Washington. On this season's visit, the commodious Hall of Nations in the Washington Hotel was well filled with interested and appreciative auditors, who accorded him the heartiest of applause, and with good reason. For his technical skill is beyond dispute, and his readings have a vitality of stimulating effect.

His program, for the first part, invited consideration of Mozart's A minor rondo, Beethoven's D major sonata from Opus 10, and the "Etudes Symphoniques" of Schumann. These were media for the disclosure of his discrimination in styles and his interpretive range in emotional projection.

After the intermission he dealt intriguingly with a prelude by Arenski, a waltz by Lyadov and three preludes by Skryabin—two from the period of Chopinesque imitation and one colored with the composer's mysticism. One would like to hear from Mr. Sklarevski sometime an all-Russian recital, for the Slavic composers for piano never receive their meed of attention, and he is particularly equipped to remedy that neglect.

Debussy's "L'Isle Joyeuse" was played with captivating scintillance and contagious rhythmic urgency. A closing Chopin group contained the F major ballade, the C sharp minor mazurka, the E flat major waltz, the E minor etude and the A major polonaise. These pieces were for the most part interpreted with finesse and poetic intent, but one wished that the polonaise had not been so dynamically unbridled.

Individual Tax Exceeds Expectations

D. C. Income Levy On Corporations, However, Falls Far Short of Goal

Amounts of the District's income tax returns from individuals and corporations have reversed the official prognostications, it developed yesterday.

Whereas officials expected difficulty in obtaining $1,000,000 from individuals, this tax reached $1,002,563 yesterday with some 20,000 returns uncounted. On the other hand the tax on the corporations doing business in the District was expected to bring in about $2,200,000, but the tax indicated from this source is only $1,324,226.

Tax Assessor Edward A. Dent said that, in compliance with the law, he would have his tax examiners begin a thorough check-up on local income tax returns and payments against those made to the Federal Government and also against those made under the old business privilege tax.

In the case of the corporation tax, Dent said he had granted extensions to some 200 firms in order to "file a better return." He pointed out that in the case of large corporations doing a small share of their national business here, it would require more time to work out the proper apportionment for District taxes. Some of these firms operate on a fiscal year basis and therefore have not yet received any accurate estimate for tax purposes. However, he does not expect that the corporation tax will exceed $1,500,000. All told, 2,755 corporations filed returns.

District officials had expected the individual returns should fall short in view of the United States Court of Appeals' decision on the term "domiciled."

Dent said of 63,214 returns on the individual tax, 46,296 showed taxable income to the amount of $1,002,563.

Mrs. Roosevelt Criticizes Lack Of D. C. Safety

Lack of industrial safety regulations here were criticized yesterday by Mrs. Roosevelt after surprise visits to two District agencies.

Accompanied by members of the women's division of the Democratic National Committee, Mrs. Roosevelt toured the offices of the District Minimum Wage Board and District Unemployment Compensation Board. Neither agency is located in the District Building.

She said she was surprised to learn the District had no Labor Department, industrial inspection service or a code of safety regulations.

Referring to the lack of the regulations, Mrs. Roosevelt said "I should think that that was one thing that working conditions here needed attention."

During the course of her tour, Mrs. Roosevelt stopped long enough to tell her friends if women stockholders read the reports sent to them by their companies and understood what they were reading maybe "we could find a key to a way to end the depression."

She was told at the wage board office that seven staff members received a combined yearly wage of $15,200 and that one male employe who had been working for 16 years was making only $1,920. Mrs. William Kittle, chairman of the wage board, told Mrs. Roosevelt amendments to the local female eight-hour law would be sent to Congress soon.

John A. Marshall, director of the D. U. C. B., told the First Lady he favored an increase in the jobless benefits from $15 to $20 a week. He also said the employers' tax was excessive.

Three Children Hurt When Struck By Automobiles

Three children were hurt in accidents yesterday.

Mary Esher, 15, of 2116 P street northwest, suffered a possible fracture of the skull, when struck at Thirty-fifth and R streets northwest by a car operated, police said, by Charles P. O'Hara, 16, of Arlington.

Anne Honkle, 8, of 1412 Crittenden street northwest, was hurt in the 4500 block of Fourteenth street northwest by a car operated by Howard F. Burton, 1405 Kennedy street northwest. Her injuries included lacerations to the arms and head.

While playing in front of his home at 802 Easling street, Silver Spring, Md., John F. Harding, 6, was hit by a car driven by Thomas M. Satimer, also of Silver Spring. In Children's Hospital John was treated for head injuries and body bruises.

WPA Photos Disprove Fire Blame Charge

Show There Was No Debris Beside House Day Before Blaze

Paul Edwards, District WPA administrator, and Fire Marshal Calvin G. Lauber yesterday presented photographic evidence to disprove the charge that their negligence had resulted in a two-alarm fire Wednesday opposite the Powell Junior High and Johnson schools.

The blaze, which started in a heap of wood and plaster, ravaged a vacant three-story brick apartment house at 1501 Lamont street northwest. The house is one of a row of 12 that is being demolished to make space for a new playground.

Occupants of several of these houses, in the 1500 block of Lamont street, said Wednesday that the debris had been there for several weeks. They charged that the WPA workmen, the fire marshal and the building inspector had refused to have the inflammable materials removed despite their repeated complaints.

Edwards and Lauber yesterday denied that the pile of debris that caused the fire had been the object of controversy. They displayed a series of photographs showing the debris had been beside the building less than 24 hours.

The photographs were taken during the noon hour Tuesday and Wednesday by WPA Photographer Lewis L. Brown. Edwards explained that for the past five months the District WPA has been taking pictures of all projects before work is started, after work is begun and at the completion of the job.

The photos taken Tuesday show workmen beginning operations on 1501 Lamont. There is no debris visible. One Wednesday picture reveals the wood and plaster piled high beside the house.

A second shot taken Wednesday shows the fire just beginning in the pile. About 50 children are gathered around, looking on curiously.

Brown said he had noticed the boys playing near the heap and shouted at them to "get away from there" because he feared they might be hurt by falling debris.

"They paid no attention to my shouts," he said. "Then I saw one of the boys light a cigarette, while the other boys stood around him. I noticed only one match struck. The next thing, not more than 10 or 15 seconds later, the pile of debris was afire."

Lauber said that the debris about which residents had complained is heaped at the other end of the row of 12 houses. This pile, he said, consists mainly of brick and is not inflammable. He denied disregarding complaints and said that his office had inspected the debris and found that it constituted no hazard.

RFC Asked for Loan On Voice, Club Told

A loan of $50,000 to cultivate a tenor voice was among the unusual applications to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation described by Emil Schram, chairman of the board of the RFC, yesterday at the Cosmopolitan Club.

No Government money was advanced for the purpose, Schram declared, but loans have been made on projects ranging from Alaska reindeer to the San Francisco-Oakland Bridge, he added.

Wayfarer Finds Homesickness A Bar to Travel

James Arthur Weiselogel, 15, went to the top of a few tall buildings in New York City—but all the sights below were obscured by the face of his mother he knew to be worried in Washington over his absence.

He had left his home, 1443 Spring road northwest, April 10, to go to a downtown movie, but instead went to a warehouse, got on a truck and after a few stop-overs, when he was accommodated with food and lodging by the truck driver whose name he never knew, landed in New York.

There he saw the sights, got homesick, went to the Travelers Aid and his mother, Mrs. E. Jayne Weiselogel, yesterday was jubilant over his return here.

Ban Urged On Insurance As Side Line

Clause Cited In New Marine, Fire, Casualty Regulatory Code

A prohibition against selling insurance as a sideline, a practice followed by many Government employes, is contained in a bill which proposes a new regulatory code for fire, casualty and marine insurance.

The clause was cited by Col. Lawrence C. Crawford, president of the District Insurers' Association, while testifying before a subcommittee of the House District Committee.

Representative Thomas D'Alesandro (Democrat), of Maryland, chairman of the Insurance and Banking subcommittee, indicated yesterday the legislation will be reported favorably to the subcommittee following another hearing next Thursday.

A subcommittee of the Senate District Committee meanwhile completed hearings on a bill to establish a code for the regulation of consumer cooperatives but withheld its report. Cooperatives are helping many consumers to "stretch their dollars," said Mrs. Eugene Callaghan, chairman of the legislative committee of the Washington branch of the American University Women.

David R. Craig, president of the American Retail Federation, said that retailers recognize the right of consumers to organize cooperatives, but asked that they be subject to the "same liabilities and be granted the same privileges as other types of retailing."

Chairman Bosses Dinner for 400 On Her Birthday

Because Holy Rosary Italian Catholic Church's most successful spaghetti "marathon" of which she was chairman, fell on last night—her birthday—Mrs. Catherine Passero was about the happiest person you could find.

Her attractive face wreathed in smiles, she scurried about the parish hall at Third and F streets northwest, greeting the more than 400 guests, including a delegation of 25 District Building employes and 15 Red Cross workers, in addition to scores of her fellow parishioners and other friends.

About 600 were served on Wednesday, the first night of this year's annual function.

As word "leaked out" about the birthday, the jolly chairman, also a well-known local vocalist, was showered with felicitations.

John McD. Fox, Attorney, Dies; Once C.U. Dean

Former Law Chief Of University Was U. S. Trial Examiner

John McDill Fox, 49, prominent Government attorney and former dean of the Catholic University Law School, died yesterday at Georgetown University Hospital after undergoing an operation for appendicitis Monday.

A native of Milwaukee, Wis., he was educated at Notre Dame University, where he took his A. B. degree in 1909, and Harvard University Law School where he received his LL. B. degree in 1914.

After two years' practice in Boston, Mr. Fox continued his independent law work in Milwaukee for 14 years, then became instructor of law at Marquette University. He served in this post two years before going to Catholic University, where he was law dean from 1930 to 1935.

Served With SEC

Next, for two years he was senior attorney with the Securities and Exchange Commission. At the time of his death he was trial examiner in charge of hearings for the Food and Drug Administration.

Cofounder of the American Academy of World Economics, and coincorporator of the American Academy of Air Law, he also was active in the Academy of Political Science, and the National Council of Naturalization and Citizenship.

Appealed to Pope

He also held membership in the American Bar Association, the Wisconsin and District bar associations, the Washington Board of Trade, and Delta Theta Phi fraternity.

In 1935 Mr. Fox appealed to the Holy See when Catholic University officials held his contract had expired. His plea went unanswered and he was locked out of his office.

Mr. Fox, who lived at 5454 Thirtieth street northwest, leaves his wife, Mrs. Elsa Sonnemann Fox, and three daughters, Miss Eileen Fox, Mrs. Mario Mazzuchio, and Mrs. John O. Hally, all of this city.

Contract Bridge

The technique of a master strategist is revealed in Charles Vogelhofer's play of today's hand, which he also met in the masters' individual championship.

The bidding:

3 NT.	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: 2 ♠.

At the contract of three no trump, Charlie made two extra tricks, managing every card with a perfect sense of timing. His partner was Lee Hazen, who placed second in the event to Morrie Elis, winner. His unlucky adversaries were Miss Florence J. Stratford, of Cleveland, and Henry H. Kreider, of Anneville, Pa.

The opening by South was the deuce of spades; Vogelhofer read the lead correctly and played the six from dummy, forcing the ace from Kreider. A low diamond was returned and the ace in dummy took. Now the jack of hearts was played; Kreider went up with the ace and played another diamond. Vogelhofer finessed the jack and it held. He led the eight of clubs and let it ride, unerringly taking the double finesse. When the club eight held the trick, he played the club four, Miss Stratford put up the ten and dummy's jack won. Vogelhofer now cashed the ace and king of clubs and the king and queen of spades.

On the last spade lead North was squeezed. He had to unguard his queen of diamonds, establishing East's diamond eight, or blank his queen of hearts, letting Vogelhofer win both the king and ten.

East made three no trump with two overtaricks, losing only the aces of spades and hearts.

President's Clipper Model To Be Shown at Folk Festival

Cutty Sark Miniature to Represent Famous Collection at Exhibition Along With One From National Museum

President Roosevelt's famous ship collection will be represented in the National Folk Festival exhibit, to be on display at Constitution Hall next Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

The model chosen from his collection is a reproduction of the Cutty Sark, a clipper ship. It is one of many which the President has acquired since the days when he was Assistant Secretary of the Navy. The collection, now one of the largest in the world, is kept on the second floor of the White House, and thus is not open to public inspection.

The original Cutty Sark was built at Dumbarton, Scotland, and launched in 1869. It is considered a prize example of a full-rigged clipper ship.

Also in the maritime exhibit at the National Folk Festival will be a model of an old-time whaler loaned by the National Museum, and a collection of harpoons and other relics of early whaling days. An exhibit of modern whaling equipment and a model of the up-to-date whaler Ulysses, loaned by the Western Operating Corporation, will provide a contrast.

Dr. Remington Kellogg, assistant curator of the National Museum, will review the history of whaling at one of the morning sessions, folklore institutes which each year are held in connection with the National Folk Festival.

Another maritime accent will be provided on the festival program itself. Several sea chanteys dating from the days of before-the-mast sailors will be sung by "Sailor Dad" Hunt, of Marion, Va., and Leo B. Reagan, of the Jib Boom Club, New London, Conn.

The handicraft exhibit will be in the lounge at Constitution Hall. A cross section of American folk art, it has been arranged by Mrs. E. Adams Whyte, recorder of the General Land Office, Department of the Interior.

Folf festival audiences will have ample opportunity to inspect the exhibit before and after the performances and during intermissions. Tickets for matinee and evening shows are on sale at The Washington Post.

Charles Adams, Others Attack SEC on Trusts

Hoover Cabinet Officer Says Regulation Would Injure Investors

By the Associated Press

A Senate Banking subcommittee heard a dozen witnesses, including a former Cabinet member and a Harvard economist, present objections yesterday to a Securities Commission proposal for regulation of investment trusts and investment companies.

The witnesses were in general agreement that regulation of the industry would be desirable, although unanimous in objecting to the methods proposed by the SEC.

Charles Francis Adams, who was Secretary of the Navy under President Hoover, opposed a requirement that investment trust directors be free from affiliation with companies in which the trust's funds were invested.

Sprague Opposes Limit

Such a provision, he testified, might "injure the best interests of investors to an extent far greater than any good which it could possibly do."

O. M. W. Sprague, Harvard banking professor and former adviser to the Bank of England and the Treasury, expressed opposition to proposed limit on the size of investment trusts.

Sprague said small trusts were best suited for operations in which trading profits were emphasized.

Some Regulation Needed

Sprague said he agreed that some regulation was necessary to prevent "such matters as pyramiding of complicated securities arrangements which seem to me always inadvisable, whther in investment trusts or in the match business."

Several Boston witnesses told the committee that the proposed legislation would make it impossible for a number of organizations to operate as "true trusts."

FCC Ignores Labor's Views, Trust Quiz Told

The Federal Communications Commission has hampered telegraph operators in their efforts to protect communication workers from "uncontrolled mechanization," the Monopoly Committee was informed yesterday in its inquiry into the machine age's impact on unemployment.

Daniel Driesen, legislative representative of the C. I. O. American Communications Association, charged that the FCC had not even "considered the viewpoint of labor" in its report on proposed merger of major telegraph companies.

The commission, in a report last December 23, "indicated that the telegraph companies by consolidation at the expense of workers' jobs will be financially able to introduce technological changes which will enable them to lay off further workers and reap additional profits," Driesen asserted.

Telegraph companies merely report to the FCC the rate of compensation to their employes, requiring no statistics on "actual wages paid, despite the fact that so large a percentage of workers employed in the industry are now on part-time," the witness said.

Driesen said the number of workers in the telegraph industry has declined 31,600 since 1930, a drop of approximately 30 per cent. Chiefly responsible for the decline, he stated, was replacement of the Morse key with the automatic multiplex telegraph and the keyboard printer.

The industry today is again in the process of "almost complete remechanization" through development of the superimposed circuits, automatic switching between circuits and automatic facsimile telegraphy, Driesen asserted.

He said that "wherever union organization is not present to prevent it, this mechanization results in unemployment, reduction in wages, increase in speed-up and worsening of working conditions."

James B. Carey, president of the United Electrical Radio and Machine Workers, testified that technological advances through elimination of jobs are destroying purchasing power faster than they cheapen prices.

Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Wyoming, committee chairman, has suggested experiments with Federal tax reductions for industries and employers who create employment opportunities.

Marion Brown Wins Miller Memorial Cup

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

"Naw," said Dominic DiMaggio, "Joe never volunteered any tips to me about my hitting, and I never asked him. It's better that way, and we both know it. Joe's big and rangy and I'm on the stumpy side. We have different strokes. Anyway, we don't talk about baseball much."

Povich

If Dominic DiMaggio attains any fame in the big leagues, he won't achieve it by clinging to the coat-tails of brother Joe of the Yankees or by basking in the reflected glory of the Yankee slugger. He doesn't want to be identified, particularly, as Joe's brother. He's proud enough of Joe, but he has ambitions of his own.

"I've got to go for myself," the expensive Red Sox rookie was saying yesterday. "Being Joe's brother won't count when I'm up there at the dish. I've got to hit that ball by myself or I'm not going to have any job in the big leagues." Then with obvious pride in Joe, he added, "and after some of the things Joe has done to these pitchers, they're not going to show me any favors up there."

For all of his self-declared independence of brother Joe, young Dominic is easily spotted as a DiMaggio the moment he steps up to the plate with the bat in his hand. There are only two men in the world who stand that way at bat—Dominic and Joe DiMaggio. Dom has that wide stance peculiar to the Yankee slugger, the infinitesimal stride toward the pitch as it is being delivered, and the grip on the very end of the bat.

It is no coincidence that the DiMaggios stand up there alike. Early in his career in the Coast League, Joe came under the tutelage of Lefty O'Doul, the ex-National League batting champion and O'Doul dictated his batting stance. Young Dominic, too, is an O'Doul product. Dominic, however, is not the same free swinger as Joe.

Already young Dominic has followed DiMaggio precedent in the big league. He managed to get himself injured in training camp and miss nearly a month of the season, even as did Joe when he reported to the Yankees in 1936. He sprained an ankle sliding into home plate, and has not yet fully recovered.

He's going to be a great help to the Red Sox, Manager Joe Cronin vows, but he's not going to be a great help to the baseball writers around the circuit. He's too conscious of the fact that he's a rookie and he prefers not to discuss himself. Again it's the DiMaggio stamp. Brother Joe during his first two years in the majors shied at being interviewed. Travel, or something, broadened Joe and he now makes small talk easily. The first comprehensive interview in which Dominic will figure will thus probably occur late in 1942.

Joe Williams, the New York sports writer relates the futility of attempting to interview Dominic. "I invited him to dinner and spent three hours with him and couldn't develop any sort of a story about Dominic. That same day I rode down the elevator with Ted Williams and between the eighth and the fourth floors I picked up my column for the day from Williams."

The Red Sox outbid the Giants and the White Sox for Dominic last winter. A Chicago scout was authorized to offer the Frisco club $60,000 for him, and the Red Sox bettered that bid. Dominic stands them $75,000 in cash and players, and thus far there is no trace of regret on their part.

"He can't miss," says Joe Cronin. "He's just like all the other DiMaggios—good ball players. He can do everything—hit, field and throw and run those bases. He thinks, too. He's going to play a tune on our left field fence."

On the street, the last thing Dominic would be identified as is a ball player. He's only a 5 foot-8-inch package, despite his 170 pounds. Wearing the thickest lense glasses in baseball, he looks like a salesman in a book shop, or somebody equally sedentary. He's the neatest dresser on the club, and his appearance belies the tough time of it he had as a kid when he was hustling papers on San Francisco streets and working around the fish docks.

He was a ball of fire in the Pacific Coast League last season, hitting .360 and earning recognition as the best ball player in it. But he has an idea it's going to be tougher in the majors. When you wish him luck, he says: "Thanks—I'll need it."

On the Line

—With CONSIDINE

New York, April 18.—The fight mob's penchant for practical jokes reached a new high the other night in Cleveland when Ray Arcel, prominent mender of broken seams in fighters' pelts, was nearly shot by a non-existent woman dope addict. He also fixed a cut eye that wasn't cut, because there was no eye to cut.

CONSIDINE

The prize fight clan has no equal in this department. It can concoct practical, working plots that would make a mystery writer writhe in envy. Mike Jacobs all but threw an apoplectic fit in Pittsburgh before the Conn-Bettina fight last summer when a man with a thick Polish accent demanded a block of seats at cut rates and threatened political reprisals if he didn't get them. The "Pole" was Lou Barnett, the gangster. Jack Dempsey had devoted a fair portion of his life to practical jokes and probably did more to elevate the hot-foot to an art than any other man in the world.

Larry Atkins, the Cleveland promoter, invited him out on a party. The party meandered to a bar on the second floor of a Cleveland building. There were several adjoining rooms leading off the bar.

Into the bar came a big, punchy-looking guy, and the bartender tried to throw him out. Atkins spoke up and said, "Aw, let the poor bum stay." He turned to Arcel and added, "he's a punchy rassler. Took too many falls on his head."

The big ape looked very grateful and sat down with the party. He seemed fascinated by Arcel and commenced babbling double-talk at him, and said he was going to push over the building in order to whitewash its cellar. Arcel had seen enough punchiness in his life to recognize this as the real McCoy.

Finally a woman's voice called in from one of the darkened rooms leading off the bar. It called the big guy's name. He got up unsteadily and went into the nearby room and soon became engaged in a terrific argument with the woman. He came out once and made a gesture. He tapped his head, pointed into the dark room, and imitated a dope addict giving himself (or rather herself) a shot in the wrist. Then he went back into the dark room, and slammed the door.

The argument continued, mounting in fury and daffiness, and Ray laughed. The argument stopped and loud and clear the woman's voice came through the door. "I heard that laugh, and now I'm going to clean you rats out of this hole." The big ape lunged against the door and let out an agonized cry of don't shoot, don't shoot Mamie."

The rest of his appeal was lost in the clatter made by Arcel and the other guests—diving under tables and trying to get out of the place. From under the table Ray called out a horrified apology, after the woman snarled, "I see you . . . you so and so. I can see you through the door. Stand up and die like a man . . . "There followed then the sounds of a terrific scuffle in the darkened room. Then the woman's scream and the moist thud of a fist against skin and bone. A body rolled down a flight of steps, and a deathly silence settled over the place.

Then, from the bottom of the steps came the moan of the woman. "You've blinded me, you blankety blank," she wailed. "Get a doctor. Oh. . . .

Atkins nudged Arcel under the table. "You better go down there and patch her up, Ray," he said. "Or we might get in some trouble."

Arcel crawled out from under the table, the medical instincts in him lending him strength, and started for the dark room. And he was just going into it when the punch drunk rassler came out—moaning in a woman's voice.

The rassler was no rassler at all, but an out of work ventriloquist.

Mrs. Meckley Wins Gross Prize With 80

Miss Brown Scores 82-4, 78; Mrs. Davy Wins Second Low Net At Washington Club

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

The winner's circle was devoid of new faces as the women golfers opened their tournament schedule yesterday in the Phyllis Keller Miller Memorial tournament at Washington Golf and Country Club. Low handicapped players made a clean sweep of the prize list, Marion Brown winning low net, Mrs. Betty Meckley low gross and Mrs. Myron Davy second low net.

It was one of the first times in women's golf history where the top-notch golfers have swept the net prizes. Miss Brown put together a pair of 41's for an 82, and deducted a 4 handicap for a net 78. Mrs. Meckley tied this score with 80-2, 78, but elected to take low gross.

Mrs. Davy, Congressional Club champion, played the most consistent golf of the day with 42-40, 82-3, 79 for second low net. Mrs. Meckley, representing Kenwood for the first time in tournament play, won the gross prize for the fifth time in seven years' play in the season's opening tournament.

Great Approach Shots

Miss Brown, playing her sixth round of golf since the '39 tournament season, three-putted four greens but made them up with four great nine-iron approach shots, one that went in the cup for a birdie from 30-yards off the sixth green and three more that paved the way for one-putt greens. The 1938 District, Middle-Atlantic and Manor Club champion, and the 1939 runner-up in each, was over-clubbing continually on the second shots but regained the strokes with fine recoveries.

Mrs. Meckley, who always plays Washington in the 70's and low 80's, ran into trouble on the third hole and finished with a double bogey six. She three-putted the seventh and eighth, and birdied the fourth via a four-foot putt. The low gross winner played the back nine in 39, despite a third-three putter on the 15th. She matched men's par on 9 holes, plus the birdie.

Mrs. Davy played the entire round without a six on her card. She had par threes on the second, ninth and eleventh, a par 4 on the twelfth and bogey 4 on the fourteenth. The other 14 holes were all fives.

Mrs. Stokes Is Fourth

Mrs. Walter R. Stokes, a two-handicapped player, was fourth with 83-2—81. Mrs. Stokes, who won the Middle Atlantic Championship over the same course last fall, birdied the long par 3 fourteenth to stand a good chance to win low net, but came right back with a big seven on the fifteenth and that cast the Manor Club player at least a tie.

Mrs. Leo Walper, Capital Club champion, had putting trouble and finished with 89-7, 82, a score tied by Mrs. Robert A. Lacey, president of the Women's Golf Association, who was 54-46, 100-18, 82.

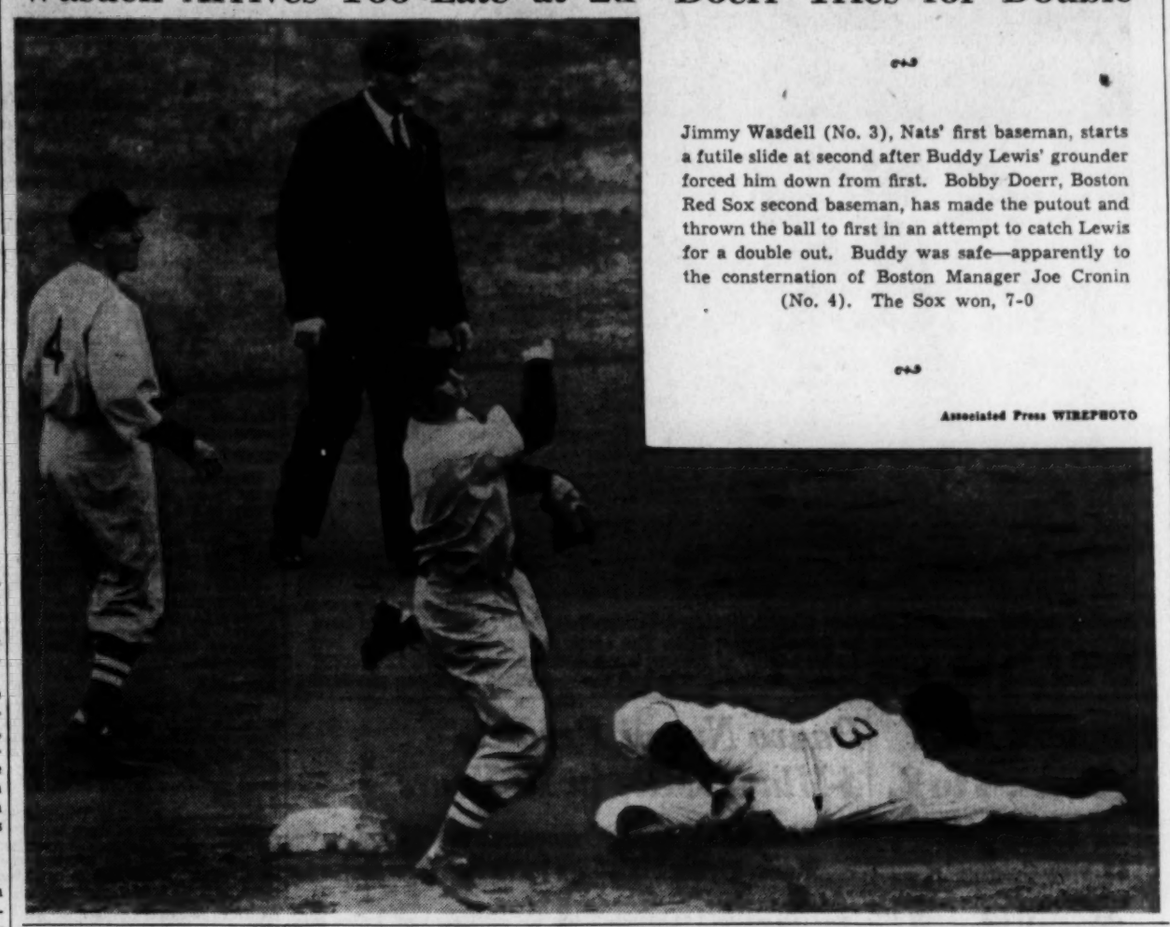
Wasdell Arrives Too Late at 2d—Doerr Tries for Double



Jimmy Wasdell (No. 3), Nats' first baseman, starts a futile slide at second after Buddy Lewis' grounder forced him down from first. Bobby Doerr, Boston Red Sox second baseman, has made the putout and thrown the ball to first in an attempt to catch Lewis for a double out. Buddy was safe—apparently to the consternation of Boston Manager Joe Cronin (No. 4). The Sox won, 7-0

Reds Beat Cubs, 2 to 1; Sweep Series

Thompson Stars On Mound; Doubles Aid Victory

By the Associated Press

Cincinnati, April 18.—Magnificent five-hitting hurling by young Gene Thompson, plus successive eighth-inning doubles by Rookie Mike McCormick and Billy Myers with a man on base, gave the Reds a series-sweeping 2-to-1 victory over Chicago's Cubs today.

The cold, damp day, better suited to football, found both Thompson and Claude Passeau in midsummer form before an overcoated crowd of 1,536.

Winner of 13 games and loser of five during last year's championship season, Thompson fanned six and walked not a man until two got to him in the ninth.

He passed Billy Herman, first up, yielded a single to Augie Galan, put Hank Leiber down on strikes for a third time and got Dominic Dallessandro to hoist.

Cavarretta Walks

Pinch-hitter Phil Cavarretta wormed the second free ticket to fill the bases and Herman crossed pay dirt as Thompson pitched wild to Bill Nicholson.

Through eight innings, not a Cub reached second base and the first ten to face Gene went down in order.

Meanwhile, last year's league champions were pecking at Passeau for eight safeties, one at a time except in the eighth-inning scoring rally.

Two of the tall former Philly's four passes were intentional. Three went to Ival Goodman, although he was bearing down each time. Twice he got Frank McCormick, last year's league-leading hitter, to whiff, and once fed him a double-play ball to end matters.

Lombardi Hit by Ball

Cincinnati's scoring came with startling suddenness.

Slow-footed Ernie Lombardi, first up, was hit by a pitched ball. Lee Gamble ran for him and Harry Craft sacrificed. Young Mike McCormick, who so far has displayed sensational fielding prowess, promptly slashed a double to right center and Myers followed with one to the scoreboard and there went the ball game.

The Reds headed for Pittsburgh tonight, while Gabby Hartnett's men returned to Chicago, where they meet the St. Louis Cards tomorrow.

Mayor LaGuardia to Throw Out First Ball; Dodgers, Giants May Draw 34,000 for First Game in Brooklyn; Double-Header in Boston

By the Associated Press

New York, April 18. The bell is ringing for the second table in baseball's big leagues and the eight clubs that had to open the season away from home Tuesday will be back in their own ball parks tomorrow.

As was the case Tuesday, the weather was uncertain in some of the cities but everyone was hopeful and colorful ceremonies were planned.

In Yankee Stadium here the Yankees will be presented with emblems of their world championship by Baseball Commissioner Kenesaw Mountain Landis before a crowd expected to be around 40,000.

To Hoist Pennant

William Harridge, president of the American League, will unveil a plaque in centerfield in memory of Col. Jacob Ruppert. The American League pennant will be hoisted on the flag pole for the fourth straight year and Mayor Fiorella LaGuardia will throw out the first ball for the Yanks and the Washington Senators.

The champions again will be without Joe DiMaggio, who now hopes to get back into the lineup Sunday.

Across town in Brooklyn the Dodgers will face their arch enemies, the New York Giants, before a probable capacity crowd of

Guernsey Wins River Oaks Tennis Match

By the Associated Press

Houston, Tex., April 18.—Wilmer Allison, Texas' grandest tennis figure, brought out the shots he used to spring on Davis Cup rivals but deadpan Frank Guernsey was too much for him today.

Guernsey, national intercollegiate champion from Rice Institute, and defending River Oaks tournament titlist, pulled out after an uphill, hour and a quarter battle, 4—6, 7—5, 6—3, to enter the semifinals.

Billy Imsteaedter, Louisiana State University student, continued his stout play, but lost to Elwood Cooke, of Portland, seeded No. 2, behind Riggs, 6—3, 9—7.

Edward Alloo, of Berkeley, Calif., and Bitsy Grant, of Atlanta, a pair who use the same tactics—flail the ball until the enemy errs—collided in a marathon affair which wound up under lights. Grant finally won, 9—7, 6—4.

In the women's singles, Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Fabyan, of Boston, No. 3 nationally and picked to win here, had little trouble with Eunice Dean, of San Antonio, 6—0, 6—2.

Virginia Wolfenden, of San Francisco, fifth in the national rankings, eliminated Nina Brown, English Wightman Cup player, 6—4, 6—2, but her teammate, Mary Hardwick, raced past Millicent Hirsch, of New York, 6—0, 6—2.

39 Indicted In Race Track Racket Case

Oldest of Horse Park Games Said to Have Mulcted Many

By the Associated Press

New York, April 18.—Thirty-nine persons, including some identified by Government agents as among the slickest confidence men in the country, were indicted today on Federal charges of mail fraud and conspiring to swindle by means of the old race track "pay-off racket."

The indictments climaxed a six-month investigation which showed, according to Assistant United States Attorney William M. Makepeace, that victims lost as much as $40,000.

One group of 11, several of them invalid, the Government contends, was duped of at least $188,700 at Daytona Beach, Fla., in 1936-37.

How Racket Worked

Makepeace said the victims went from both the United States and Canada to visit at the Florida city.

Oldest and most successful of the race track swindles, the scheme works like this:

A "steerer" meets his intended victim in a hotel, later introduces him to a "spieler," who advances himself as a horse breeder's representative on "important" but secret business.

The victim is finally convinced that the horse he bets on cannot lose, because the race has been fixed, presumably by the "representative." The horse wins, but before the victim collects he is required to produce sufficient cash to prove that he could have paid had he lost.

Once the "good faith" money is obtained, the confidence men disappear. Later, the victim learns he has been duped by an elaborately faked setup. It's an old fraud.

Among defendants is Thomas J. O'Dell, acquitted of similar charges in 1938 before retired United States Supreme Court Justice Willis Van Devanter.

O'Dell, whose home is in New Britain, Conn., was convicted in Florida in 1935 of swindling a victim of $100,000. He was fined $1,000.

Warrants for 32 arrests issued by Federal Judge Edward A. Conger, included one for Larry J. Johnson, proprietor of the Breakers Hotel at Daytona Beach.

Jimmie Foxx Gets Homer With 2 On

Rookie Hudson Gives Nine Hits; Bagby Limits Washington To Five Blows

By Shirley Povich.

Sidney Hudson's pitching debut in the big leagues yesterday was a smashing success—for the Boston Red Sox. A Mr. Jimmy Foxx introduced young Hudson to the violent tenuencies of big league hitters by smashing a home run with two on base in the fifth inning. The upshot was that the Red Sox won the ball game, 7 to 0.

Highly-publicized pride of the Nats' rookie crop, young Hudson, fresh out of the class D Florida State League, exhibited no panic but he did not exactly baffle the Red Sox. They knocked him loose from nine hits, two of them doubles, one a triple and another the aforementioned homer of Foxx.

Not only was he facing the No. 1 hitting team in the majors, but he had the misfortune, also, to meet up with Jim Bagby on a day when that young man was pitching shutout ball. Only five hits did the puerile Nats make against Bagby—four of them singles.

Nats Get Man to Third

Thus for the second consecutive game, the Nats have achieved a total of no runs against Boston pitching. But yesterday, against Bagby, the Nats showed a definite improvement over their batting performance against Grove in the opening game. Yesterday they advanced a man as far as third base—one man.

Four thousand fans braved the threat of rain to sit in on Hudson's bow in the majors, and for two innings they were highly impressed. Then the rookie righthander lost both his control and his effectiveness, walking five batters and yielding runs in four innings before he was relieved by Bucky Jacobs at the start of the ninth.

But for Hudson's well-wishers there was a measure of balm. The rookie was cool throughout his performance and coincidentally he gave the fans one of the cleverest fielding exhibitions by a pitcher ever witnessed in Griffith Stadium. Twice he saved himself damage by pouncing on ground balls and making brilliant throws to first.

Bagby justified press notices from the South which hailed him this spring as an improved pitcher after a siege in the Southern Association. The son of old Jim Bagby bamboozled the Nats with a fast ball and allowed only one hit until the sixth inning.

DiMaggio Makes First Hit

Two innings, before Jimmy Foxx delivered the big blow of the game, young Dominic DiMaggio, making his first hit in the big leagues, precipitated a run for the Red Sox. With two out in the third inning, DiMaggio doubled down the left field line and trotted home with a run when Cramer singled to center.

Two were out, also, when Hudson ran into a three-run storm in the fifth. Cramer singled and went to second on a wild pitch. Williams was given a semi-intentional base on balls at this point, and then along came Foxx. On the first pitch Foxx boomed a line drive into the left field bleachers for his first homer of the season.

Bobby Doerr led the Red Sox to a run in the sixth, when he doubled to left field. Tabor beat out a bunt down the third base line and, after Desautels walked, Doerr scored while Pofhal and Bloodworth were converting Bagby's grounder into a double play.

This same Doerr contributed further grief for Hudson in the seventh after Williams had singled to center and Foxx had walked. There were two out, as usual, when the blow fell. It took the form of a three-bagger by Doerr against the fence in right, and two more Boston runs were home.

Jacobs Pitches Ninth

Bucky Jacobs pitched the ninth and found himself in a heap of trouble when he walked Cramer and Williams. And when Pofahl threw wildly to second on Foxx's grounder, the Sox had the bases full and none out. They didn't score because Jacobs took Cronin's grounder and threw to the plate to start a double play.

Pinch-Hitter Jake Early batted for Hudson in the eighth and smashed a single through Bagby's legs to open the inning, but he was doubled off first by Dominic DiMaggio who gathered in Jimmy Wasdell's long fly.

Eastern Meets Anacostia, Roosevelt Battles Western Today

Tide Victors Of Interhigh Race 11 Times

Coach Pessimistic But Club Shapes Up Good; Nance May Pitch for Raiders

With the finest baseball record in the interhigh series behind it, Eastern, led by canny Coach Charley Guyon, features the first doubleheader of the season today when it does battle with Anacostia's unpredictable Indians on the latter's diamond.

The other end of the twin war will be staged at Western, where the home team goes up against Roosevelt. Both games start at 3:30. Neither will be called off unless a deluge forces it.

Eleven times in the last 16 years, most of them under the supervision of Guyon, Eastern has wound up its season with the public school crown to its credit. Responsibility for that remarkable feat belongs as much to the "Chief" as to the long succession of stellar players turned out at the East Capitol street school.

Team Fighting All Time

Even last year, when Central beat out an inferior Eastern nine for the title, Guyon had his team in there until the last ditch. The last game of the year between the clubs decided things.

In his customary pessimistic attitude, Guyon says he hasn't much hope this year.

"We haven't had a lick of competition yet," the graying mentor frets. "The pitchers have been working out all the time, but I don't know about the rest of the team. Our hitting probably won't be so good, and neither will our fielding. We're going to have a tough time."

If Eastern isn't in the final round robin it won't be because Guyon hasn't tried every trick in his fertile baseball mind.

Pitching for the Tide today will be Johnny Deavers, 6-foot righthander. Jack Teague will handle the catching assignment. Anacostia, of course, will send big Art Faircloth, its star curve-baller, to the mound.

Nance or Nimmon Hurl

Western will pin its hopes for a triumph over Roosevelt on either Southpaw Carmel Nance or Righthander Joe Nimmon. The Rivers may start Eddie Vermillion, with Hymie Perlo back catching after a period of playing the outfield.

Hot county rivalries also stand out on the scholastic card. In Alexandria, G. W. High and Washington-Lee go at it again in their attempts to dominate nearby Virginia athletics. And at Rockville the forces of Montgomery Blair and Richard Montgomery tangle in their annual Montgomery County classic.

Forced to postpone their game yesterday, Gonzaga and Georgetown Prep try again today at Garret Park. After an opening victory in the interhigh series, Tech moves out to Bethesda-Chevy Chase, to close out hostilities.

Lash Replaces Rice As Opponent for Maki

New Orleans, April 18 (U.P.).—Don Lash former University of Indiana distance runner, today replaced Greg Rice as opponent for Taisto Maki, of Finland, in a 3-mile race next Sunday.

Rice telegraphed President Lawrence Dibenedetto, of the national A. A. U., that he had pulled a muscle in the longitudal arch of his right foot, and could not run. Dibenedetto telephoned last at Bloomington, Ind., asking him to substitute.

Beating out his teammate, Marston Girard, Stanford University's Paul Moore is shown here setting a new world record for the three-quarter-mile. The crack runner knocked almost two seconds off the mark of Jules Ladoumegue, of France, when he finished in 2:58.7. The record had stood since 1931. Girard, in second, managed to beat the recognized American standard

Charley Gehringer, Greenberg Connect As Bridges Wins

By the Associated Press

Detroit, April 18.—Home runs by Hank Greenberg and Charley Gehringer enabled the Detroit Tigers to beat the St. Louis Browns 4 to 2 today for their first victory of the American League season.

Each team got seven hits but the long-distance clouting of the Tigers decided the issue.

Greenberg delivered his four-base smash in the first after Vernon Kennedy had walked Gehringer. In the sixth Hank tripled to centerfield with Gehringer on base.

Gehringer's circuit blow came in the eighth with the bases empty.

Tommy Bridges, veteran Detroit moundsman, limited the Browns to eight bases on their seven hits. He struck out six and walked four, two singles and a pass producing a run in the third and three singles a score in the seventh.

Paavo Nurmi Predicts 4-Minute Mile in 10 Years

Competition and Concentration Will Lower Mark, Flying Finn Says in Visit to New Orleans

By the Associated Press

New Orleans, April 18.—Paavo Nurmi, the old flying Finn, looked into the future today and predicted that ten years hence somebody is going to run a 4-minute mile.

The retired distance runner, whose Olympic record is an athletic legend, said that when some boy, 14 years old today, comes along about 1950 with that accomplishment it will not be a great surprise because before then there will be 4.03, 4.02 and 4.01 miles.

Nurmi is here with his Finnish protege, Taisto Maki, who will run against Don Lash Sunday for the Finnish Relief Fund.

"It's foolish to consider the 4-minute mile beyond the limit of human possibilities," he said in precise, deliberate English.

"The remarkable feats of Jack Lovelock, Glenn Cunningham, Sid Wooderson and now Chuck Fenske have proved that the figure will be driven down consistently. Competition has done it—competition and the great gift you Americans have for concentration. I think we Finns have some of it, too.

"I never specialized in the mile, but I honestly believe that if I had concentrated on the mile, as have Cunningham, Fenske, Wooderson and these others, I could have driven the time down to 4.06 or 4.07 15 years ago. If that had happened, perhaps the 4-minute mile would have been here by now."

Asked how such a mile would be run, the great Finnish runner quickly replied:

"It will be run even speed. Four 60-second quarters. That is less exertion and that is the way it will

The Terror, Jack Hader Win at Arena

O'Toole Beaten; Kirilenko Bows In 19½ Minutes

Double feature wrestling came back to Turner's arena last night, but that was about all—the crowd stayed away in droves. Only 900 turned out to see The Terror stop Tommy O'Toole and Jack Hader subjugate a subject of the late Czar, Matros Kirilenko.

The Terror, or Bob Weatherly, used his knees on the anatomy of O'Toole in a careless fashion that was highly unpopular with the ringside's perennial hecklers. They gave The Terror the raspberry, the referee gave him the decision after just 33½ minutes of huffing and puffing.

Hader polished off the former Russian Cossack after 19½ minutes with a crab hold.

In the preliminaries, Warren Bockwinkle defeated Jim Caffield in 18½ minutes, Rudy Dusek and Tommy Rae drew and Abe Kaplan defeated Abe Stein in 11½ minutes with a body press.

The softball team of the Alexandria Iron Works is seeking a game for Sunday afternoon in Washington. Challengers call Manager McCracken at Alexandria 0058 after 4 p. m.

Man of the Month

Again this season, The Washington Post and Station WJSV conducts The Man of the Month contest to determine the Nats' most valuable players for each month. Following each game, Arch McDonald will distribute points to the Washington players as he deems performances merit. The Post will reward each winner of the Man of the Month contest with a $50 merchandise order.

The Nats went looking for more trouble immediately after their second straight shut-out by the Red Sox . . . They boarded a 6 p. m. train for New York where they will meet the Yankees in three straight games . . . Bucky Harris devised a southpaw pitching program against the Yankees . . . Ken Chase will pitch the series opener, Joe Krakauskas will start the second game and for the third game Harris is reserving Al Hollingsworth, the recent acquisition from Brooklyn . . . Griffith Stadium's first boos of the season were directed yesterday toward Gerry Walker who thus far is not popular with bleacher fans . . . It is a new experience for Walker who was the people's choice when he was playing for Detroit and Chicago . . . Sid Hudson's clever fielding won him the applause of yesterday's gathering on three occasions . . . Buddy Lewis won the approval of the pavilion customers with his running catch of Bagby's drive in the fourth inning . . . Bucky Harris was entirely displeased by Hudson's performance for the Nats . . . "His pitch to Foxx was too good," said Harris . . . "He has to learn that you can't lay it down the middle for hitters like Foxx." . . . Cecil Travis robbed Dom DiMaggio of a hit with a sensational pick-up and throw in the sixth inning . . . Only a high wind kept Jimmy Wasdell's eighth-inning drive in the park and permitted DiMaggio to catch the ball against the rightfield fence . . . Today against the Yankees, the Nats expect to face either Bump Hadley or Steve Sundra . . . Clark Griffith, who never misses a chance to heckle the Yanks accompanied his team to New York.

CASE

There were meager honors for the Nats yesterday in their 7-0 shutout by the Red Sox, but George Case's performance cannot be overlooked . . . To Case five points in the Man of The Month contest, because he made two of the Nats' five hits, one of them a two-line drive in the eighth inning . . . To Buddy Lewis, three points, because he made one of the Nats' hits, and because his running catch of Bagby's long drive in the fifth was the fielding feature of the game . . . To Jake Early, two points, because he drove a hard single to center in a pinch-hitting role.

St. Louis, April 18 (AP).—Catcher Joe Glenn of the Browns, one of the last two holdouts in the major leagues, conferred today with Vice President William O. Dewitt but did sign a contract. He will meet with President Donald L. Barnes tomorrow.

Glenn, before coming here, presented his case to Judge K. M. Landis, commissioner of baseball, in Chicago.

No Change in National Or City Pin Tourneys

Mrs. Isemann States Husband Would Have Wished Tournament Be Held as Scheduled; Bowling Congress Meets Friday

The Washington City Duckpin Association championships will start tonight at Arcadia as scheduled, according to Arville Ebersole, executive secretary of the city bowling body.

Ebersole talked with Mrs. George L. Isemann, widow of the bowling leader who died early yesterday in New Haven, last night from the Connecticut city. It was her desire "that the National and Washington championships proceed as scheduled, as I know Mr. Isemann would have wished." She asked that both tournaments carry on, and that nothing be changed.

Ed Feustel, assistant secretary of the National Duckpin Bowling Congress, from New Haven, was appointed by Miss Bronson Quaites, president of the organization from this city, to run the tournament, that started last Sunday.

For the first time in the history of the Congress the late Mr. Isemann enrolled more than 300 teams, a goal he set years ago. Miss Quaites instructed the national tournament officials to carry on, per Mrs. Isemann's wishes.

The congress officials will meet next Friday in New Haven for the annual election of officers, and Mr. Isemann's successor will be named at that time.

District bowlers and bowling executives were unanimous in opinion last night that operations of the national congress will be increased many fold next year as it will be virtually impossible to find a man that will put his entire life into the game as did Mr. Isemann.

Ralph Fraser, manager of the Arcadia Bowling Alleys where the city tournament starts tonight, summed it up when he said "the bowlers have lost their best friend and he will never be replaced."

Erwin Offers Arturo Godoy $5,000 for Bout Here in June

Nathan Mann Or Everett Would Be Foe

Matchmaker Also Considers Bob Pastor, Max Baer for Heavy Bout at Riverside

Matchmaker Jimmy Erwin yesterday placed Riverside Stadium in the running for an outstanding heavyweight fight in Washington in June with the announcement he had offered Arturo Godoy a $5,000 guarantee to fight the winner of Tuesday night's Nathan Mann-Buck Everett 10-round battle.

Mann, who comes to town Monday to go through a warm-up workout for his date at Riverside with Everett, is being considered by Promoter Mike Jacobs as a possible opponent for Joe Louis this summer.

Erwin also said he planned to make Maxie Baer or Bob Pastor an offer to meet the winner of the Mann-Everett affair, in the event Al Weill, Godoy's manager, spurns the offer.

May Be Refused

If Weill follows his usual strategy, it's likely that Erwin's offer will get a very cold shoulder. Godoy, now leading the pack as far as a Louis fight is concerned, has been beaten once by Mann and there's not much reason to believe he can do any better now. Mann is acknowledged as one of the cleverest fighters in the current crop of heavyweights.

While Mann was flattened by Louis in three rounds and Godyo went 15 to lose a split decision, Weill would be taking a chance of having his current meal ticket punched out of a chance for a return title fight. Weill was in Denver, Colo., with Lou Ambers yesterday.

Meanwhile, Everett, who will be about a 5 to 1 underdog against Mann Tuesday, was continuing his workouts at Huron gymnasium with Maynard Daniels, youthful Marine heavyweight.

Miller On Card

Daniels will fight Jimmy Johnson's 6-foot-4 heavy, Gunboat Miller, in the eight-round semifinal of a supporting card that packs plenty of "pulling power."

Sammy Magro, the Birmingham, Ala., knockout artist introduced here in Erwin's first show, will appear on the preliminary card. Magro is the lad Erwin expects to see in a headline spot shortly if Washington fans take the Riverside fight venture to their bosom.

Everett, Magro and Daniels will work out today at 12:30 p. m. at the Huron gym, 511 Eleventh street northwest, for the benefit of the public.

Capital Dog Show Deadline Is Extended

Entries Close Today; Alexandria Body Closes List Tomorrow

Deadline for entries in the National Capital Kennel Club show has been advanced until 6 p. m. today, President Gordon Louk announced last night. More than 600 entries for the show, to be held at Riverside Stadium next Thursday and Friday, have already been received, Louk said.

Entries may be phoned to Louk at Greenwood 4152 or North 4337 or dropped by the box office at Riverside today.

The annual event of the Old Dominion Kennel Club is scheduled for Saturday at the Alexandria Ball Park and coming as it does a couple of days later than the Riverside event, entries may be accepted until 6 o'clock tomorrow night.

Advance entries indicate a larger number of dogs than ever before and it is hoped that when the closing time arrives tomorrow, enough dogs will have been entered to make the Alexandria show rate as one of the ten largest dog shows in the country.

An unprecedented number of local dogs have already been entered, many more than have ever appeared before. This remarkable entry may be attributed probably to the club's policy of reserving classes for local dogs to novices only, all breeders and professional handlers barred.

Entry blanks may be obtained today and tomorrow at Schmid's pet shop, 712 Twelfth street northwest, where members of the club will assist in filling them in properly, at any veterinarian's office or at McKee Service Center, Twenty-second and N streets northwest. For those who feel they don't know enough about dog shows to show their dogs, the club is holding instruction classes at the Alexandria Ball Park Sunday afternoon or those entering local dogs may have club members handle their dogs in the ring at no cost.

Lawsuit to Keep Les Scarsella Out Of Cincinnati

By the Associated Press

Boston, April 18.—Les Scarsella, the Boston Bees' spare first baseman, will be unable to accompany his teammates to Cincinnati, his home town, this season, it was learned today.

Scarsella is being sued by his father-in-law, who also resides in Cincinnati, as a result of an automobile accident in which the ball player's wife was killed as they were traveling to the Bradenton, Fla., training camp in February.

Manager Casey Stengel has given Scarsella permission to remain in Boston when the Bees play in Cincinnati. The situation is similar to the one that kept Pitcher Paul Derringer, of the Reds, out of New York last season until a suit brought against him for assault and battery was settled.

Volley Ball Games Won by Y Blues

In earlier games last night the Y Reds beat the White House Police, 15-0, 15-4, and Takoma Park defeated the Uniformed Force, 15-9, 14-15, 15-2.

Beginning at 7 p. m. tomorrow, White House Police meet the Uniformed Force and the Y Reds play Takoma Park. The winners of these games play for the chance to meet the Y Blues in the final game for the title.

David Johnsen, City of Washington champion and captain of the local team, defeated Braverman, losing only two games and paired with Blankin to win the first doubles match with the loss of six games.

Potomac Hunt Feature Draws 15 Contestants

Riding and Hunt Club Plate Goal Tomorrow At Great Elm Farm

By Anne Hagner

More than 15 entries are scheduled to be in competition for the featured Riding and Hunt Club plate in the Potomac Hunt's annual hunter trials, at Great Elm Farm, near Travilah, Md., tomorrow.

Heading the list is Margaret Sanderson's Poussin, who already won two "legs" on the challenge bowl. A victory this year would cinch permanent possession of the trophy for Miss Sanderson's well-mannered mare, and her winning performance in Potomac's point-to-point races early this month indicates that she is in top shape.

Events Open at 11:30

Other entrants are Claude Owen's Scarlet Coat, Robin Riddick's Cheyanna, Mrs. Ernest L. Smith's Seagram, G. Edward Altemus' Miss Ex, Taylor Chewning, jr.'s Locket, Mrs. Marshall O. Exnicios' Shiftless, Fenton Fadeley's Skippy, Headrock and Prince Gibbon; Col. W. M. Grimes' Muddy River, Patricia Henry's Gabby's Scamp, Mrs. Joseph Horgan's Cricket II and William C. Hanson's Battalion.

Five other classes make up the card, with a sizable entry list in each. Additional exhibitors are Edwin Hardy, jr.'s Herolax, John Devereaux with the Landon School's Courageous Beth, Anna Hedrick's Madrigal Tom, Nancy Hanna's Gone Away, Gen. Guy V. Henry's King Story, Oliver Durant's Little Princess, and Charles Carico's Recall.

Donors Listed

The committee includes Marshall Exnicios, chairman; Dr. J. N. Greear, jr., secretary; W. H. (Shorty) Lipscomb, Wilbur Hubbard, and Maj. Henry Leonard, judges; Elizabeth Jackson, starter, F. D. C. Lacrosse Ten to Play North Carolina

Practice may make perfect but it makes a man—especially former college men, tired, too, so the Washington A. A. lacrosse team worked only twice this week in preparation for tomorrow's match with North Carolina at Central Stadium. Tuesday and yesterday Coach Joe Deckman had his men out on the Anacostia field and he thinks it'll be enough to turn back the Tarheels.

Washington, incidentally, has hopes of getting back in the championship running against Mount Washington May 4 at Baltimore. The Mounties swamped Johns Hopkins Wednesday night, much to lacrosse experts' surprise, and if the District team stops them over there next month it will have to be reckoned with.

North Carolina will start the following line-up: Goal, Darden; point, Werner or Berdan; cover point, Remy; first defense, Desich; second defense, Beers; center, Clark; second attack, Broadfoot; first attack, Harris or Karol; in home, Finkel; out home, Rosenbloom. Alternates are Gay, Kimball, Spranzi, Leaming, Gugert, Singletary, Pyle, Dugger, Sternberg, Loewenson and Rouiller.

The Tarheels nosed out Duke last week in their opening match, 5-4.

40,000 Fans May Witness Nats' Game

34,000. An advance sale of 27,000 reserved seats was reported.

It will be patriots' day in Boston and the Massachusetts metropolis will have the majors' first double outing—a morning and afternoon combination by the Red Sox and Philadelphia Athletics.

Fenway Park has been profusely decorated and will see top coats and gold braid of governors, mayors and Army and Navy officers if a forecast rain holds off. Preparations have been made for crowds of 11,000 and 20,000.

Cleveland will welcome the triumphant Indians in the 80,000 capacity Municipal Stadium, but temperatures are frigid and guesses on the crowd run about 20,000. On the basis of his training efforts 35-year-old Johnny Allen will be the Tribe's starting pitcher against the Detroit Tigers, but nobody expects him to match the no-hit stunt Cleveland's Bobby Feller gave Chicago Tuesday.

The Browns expect to get out a throng of 50,000 at St. Louis for the White Sox's appearance in the other American League contest.

Cincinnati's National League champs will help Pittsburgh get going at Forbes Field with 25,000 fans expected to crowd into Forbes Field to see Manager Frank Frisch, his recruits from Boston and the new floodlight towers.

A favorable weather forecast has given Chicago expectations of a similar throng for the Cubs' debut against the Cardinals, while 15,000 or 20,000 may get to see the victorious Phillies against the Boston Bees at Shibe Park if rain holds off.

Farewell Notes Left By Selby Who Rose To Fame From Ring

By Dale Stafford
Associated Press Staff Writer

Detroit, April 18.—In the quiet of a hotel room peaceful death came today to Norman Selby, the glamorous Kid McCoy of the boxing ring whose amazing life story would have been labeled fantastic fiction if its chapters had been woven into a novel.

McCoy, who did more and saw more in his 66 years than the average man dares to dream about, died from either an overdose of sleeping medicine or poison, according to Dr. Lyle C. Ling, deputy coroner.

Hobo and millionaire sportsman; dishwasher and social lion; claimant of the world's middleweight title and convict; owner of an exclusive New York jewelry store and bankrupt; movie actor and saloon porter; auto racer and confidante of Maurice Maeterlinck, the poet and mystic; hero of a short story classic by Richard Harding Davis and demonstrator of a new-fangled health suspender—these descriptions all fitted The Kid, who was married nine times, three times to the same woman.

One note left by McCoy said:

Another note—he probably would have called it the "real McCoy"—said:

"To all my friends I wish the best of luck."

"For the past eight years I have wanted to help humanity," The Kid wrote, "especially the youngsters, who do not know nature's laws, to help teach them the proper carriage of the body, the right way to eat, etc."

Temple Nine Meets Hoyas Here Today

Vinnie Powers May Go Route for Hoyas; Seek Fifth in Row

Vinnie Powers, Georgetown University's right-handed pitcher, may go the route today when Temple University's nine is entertained on the Georgetown Medical diamond at 2:30 o'clock.

The Hoyas, seeking their fifth consecutive victory, yesterday were jubilant over the pitching exhibited by Capt. John Smith, their right-handed veteran, who delivered one of the finest games of his career as Georgetown nosed out Navy in ten innings this past Tuesday, 3 to 2.

One of several shifts contemplated by Coach Joe Judge finds John Lascari moved into rightfield. John Dieckelman, a southpaw pitcher, and Joe Moran formerly had been alternated at the post.

Elks' Softball Team To Practice Sunday

Schmeling Would Like to Meet Louis Again

Max Afraid British Would Not Let Him Through Blockade

By the Associated Press

Berlin, April 18.—Max Schmeling, former heavyweight champion, would like to fight Joe Louis again if the pesky British would let him through the blockade.

Schmeling, tough and brown as a betel nut, dropped in at the Foreign Correspondents Club on the weekly "American night" to chat about the ten trips he made to the United States between 1928 and 1939 to whip or be whipped by the outstanding fighters of that dozen years, when he was always a contender and once a champion.

"I should like to fight him," said Schmeling. "I know better how he fights than anybody."

But Schmeling, who beat Louis once and then took an awful drubbing in return, has no great hopes of meeting the Negro boxer again, what with a war standing squarely in his path.

Max 34 Years Old

"The British would take me off the boat," he said, making a gesture with his big hand to imitate a giant Britisher plucking him off the sports deck of the Conte Di Savoia at Gilbraltar.

Although he is 34—a ripe middle age for boxers—Schmeling hasn't given up the sport. This summer he will fight his fellow German, Walter Neusel, with his own European championship at stake against Neusel's German title—if the war permits.

MAX SCHMELING

Former Champion In Great Shape; Has Friends in U. S.

He is keeping himself in good condition, and looks it. When on his estate in Pomerania, on the Baltic coast, he runs about the countryside 3 or 4 miles, and while in Berlin he takes vigorous setting-up exercises every day. He is a model of clean living. He has not smoked since he was 14, and does not drink.

Max was a walking blotter for news of the United States, particularly of Postmaster General Farley and President Roosevelt. Some time ago he sent the President a batch of stamps for his collection, but suspected Mr. Roosevelt was too busy these days to pay much attention to such things.

Farley His Friend Now

"Jim Farley and I used to fight all the time when he was boxing commissioner," Schmeling grinned, "but now we are great friends."

Schmeling would like to get back to the United States for a spell. He has been there so much in recent years that he has more intimate friends there than here. He was boyishly eager to talk with Americans so he could brush up his Yankee vocabulary.

English, it might be added, is one of the more popular languages in the Reich.

Preakness Hope Loses 4th Event

Abrasion Beaten By Woodchopper In Shenandoah Valley Purse

By Walter Haight
A Staff Correspondent

Havre de Grace, Md., April 18.—A thrilling dead heat and the defeat of a Preakness candidate enlivened a dreary day at the races for 7,000 customers. The judges called for pictures before and after the finish of the featured fifth race following close scrutiny of the photo of the two horses on the line and decided that there was no separating of J. Womser's Rodin and the Christiana Stable's Foxshade. Thus backers of the two horses, the 7-10 favorite and the 15-1 shot, took half a loaf with all hands apparently satisfied with the split decision.

J. W. Y. Martin's Abrasion was the Preakness hope that went down to defeat over the heavy track and the winner was Wood Chopper, owned by Mrs. Elmer Trueman, of Washington, and wintered at the Districts' own Benning track. Wood Chopper, like Abrasion, which was installed the favorite, was making his first start of the year. His victory came in the Shenandoah Valley Purse, fourth on the program. The winner paid $12.30.

Bewitched Early Leader

In the dead heat race, the Harewood Handicap, Bewitched a longshot, set the pace with Foxshade closest to him. Rodin was saving ground and under restraint. Bewitched began to fade nearing the stretch and Foxshade took command. Jockey Carlton, on Rodin, then turned his mount loose and the Chance Shot gelding moved up along the rail. It was anybody's race between the two from that point to the wire. Rodin appeared to have a head the best of it with some 20 yards to go and then Foxshade, under strong handling by Jockey Nick Wall, came again in the concluding jumps.

Rodin brought an across-the-board pay-off of $2.60, $2.90 and $2.30 to his followers, while those who placed their hopes in Foxshade received $7.80, $8.90 and $3.80.

Well played horses figured in both victories in the daily double races, which brought a $28.90 pay-off. In the opening event for 2-year-olds, Charmful, owned by the now Mrs. James Harrison, widow of Cary T. Grayson, was the winner by a half-length over Bettie Nux, the favorite, with Cook Book up. Charmful showed a liking for the heavy track and paid a $9.90 mutuel.

J. Yancey Christmas' Rough Biscuit brought joy to the Marlboro (Md.) fans by taking the second race in the role of a $5.70 favorite. He took the lead early and jogged along in front, as all favorites should. Miss Baker was second, and Queen's Advice was third in the field of 11.

"Dynamite" Kerr's Dizzy Dame, paying $5, made it two in a row in the third race. The old mare, ridden by the young Selby Clark, ran a remarkable race. She developed momentum in the stretch and closed with a bold rush between horses, to win going away. Rissa and Kay Man followed her over the line.

RODIN steadied along while running forwardly, came through on inside when placed to drive and held on gamely under pressure to end. FOXSHADE, rated while closest to BEWITCHED'S pace, took command entering stretch and fought it out with gingly. SOLARIUM stumbled leaving gate and rallied mildly while racing on outside in stretch run. SIROAY raced wide to improve position and tired. BEWITCHED set a strong pace, but weakened suddenly after 5 furlongs. SKETCHBOOK was outrun. RUN BY had early speed and stopped.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:11½. Off 5:12. Winner, Mrs. G. SURE TOUCH was forward factor after breaking in front and weakened gradually in final quarter. ODDESA FRANK was hustled for half and weakened. SUN BREEZE was quite close up and tired. NOBLE SCOT had early speed. LIMERICK was through early.

MOLASSES BILL weakened in closing test after moving up with good energy. EMMA H. had early speed. MR. DUNCANNON set pace under hustling tactics and stopped.

Selections at Havre de Grace.

Dear Al: A. G. Vanderbilt, who finds time to train or help with the conditioning of his horses, in addition to being top man at Pimlico and Belmont Park, probably will start two of his star horses here next week. They are Now What and Impound. Jockey Sonny Workman has been working these and others of the stable. Trainer Lee McCoy willl saddle the pair. After seeing both Andy K. and Pictor in action, most of the paper boys believe the latter, owned by W. L. Brann, is the best prospect for the Kentucky Derby. However, I haven't given up on Andy K. He ran his race along the rail in he heaviest going and, for a first start of the year, his race wasn't half bad. To me he appears a bit overtrained. The stewards are through with Timber Lady, at least for the time being. She has been banned for refusing to break the other day. She was handed the same dose in Florida last winter. Jo key Georgie Woolf is working horses in an effort to get in top riding shape. He is scheduled to pilot Pictor in Saturday's Chesapeake Stakes. Lefty Wilhelm has taken over the book of Jockey Bob Duncan. Yancey Christmas has taken Rough Time, his sprinting star, out of training. This is a tough break for Christmas, whose Rough Pass went wrong and was scratched from the Derby lineup. The stewards were frowning plenty yesterday at the ride which Apprentice H. Lemmons put up on Playmore in Wednesday's sixth race. One official went so far as to say "That boy is well named." He took the words right out of my mouth. Tony Palleteri likes his 2-year-old Tripet, a winner on the program opening day. He believes the son of Flying Heels is going to be a real good race horse. Here's a tip on Tripet. Pelleteri believes the colt will win the Aberdeen Stakes next Wednesday. Eddie Smith, the Washington jockey, is doing a lot of traveling these days. After riding here earlier in the week, he went to New York and won with Airflame. He returned to this track and then left for New England to ride Airflame in Saturday's stake at Narragansett Park. The biggest form flip-flop I have seen around here was Sun Capture. He won with plenty of money bet on him after running like a fugitive from a can of dog food at Bowie. Of course, the change of tracks is the excuse. Confucius say: Doctor's Nurse is sweet thing.

BILL.

First race—Bright Harvest needed his races at the Bowie course and is dropping down to meet slightly cheaper company in today's opening number. Strong contention may be provided by Fitmiss, a first-time starter belonging to J. P. Jones. Sunareve raced at Santa Anita and rates a good chance in this company.

Second race—Marin is endowed with a burst of early speed and with little early foot to contend with in this field, he figures to stick it out. Hayam received his conditioning for this affair when racing behind Andy K. recently and may be a threat in the late stages. Breaking Waves has a money chance.

Third race—Paradise Girl falls in with a very cheap lot in this event and, despite poor recent form, could win it if she runs back to one good race last winter. Ten-O-Hearts was a beaten favorite in a cheap race at Tropical last start and might be the one to beat. Giggle Lee showed promise in her last race and may be close.

Fourth race—Grand Pageant has been schooling well since breaking slowly last start at Bowie. He has the speed to whip platers of this sort and is reported ready for the question. Blabah has early speed and will like the muddy going, but moves up after winning his last race. Greeny can better poor recent races.

Fifth race—Felsun held his own when competing against higher grade platers on the Florida circuit. He likes mud and appears well placed in this event. Greedan won his last over this track, but the time was very poor. The Queen has not been consistent, but could make trouble on her best effort.

Sixth race—Busy Fingers has apparently regained her best form, having won her last two in the mud at Bowie. She meets competition of a higher caliber today, but still holds the edge. Siganar impressed favorably when winning at Bowie and is a member of the highly successful Millsdale string. Sealoch has a good money chance.

Seventh race—Bounding Count is reported to be keyed up to highest edge for this encounter and meets the usual cheap field platers Conville merits consideration off his recent Bowie race. Flag Etta should be able to whip the others.

Best bet—Marin.

Horses to Watch In Maryland

HOWARD—This old fellow is holding his edge and should score in first attempt at this track.

HALETHORPE—This 2-year-old did not like the heavy track going on Wednesday but should run well over a fast track.

LOTTERY—Was much the best when beaten by a nose by Iskie. Will turn the tables the next time they meet.

HASTE BACK—A speedy youngster that will beat a high class field at this meeting.

CANDLE ENDS—A router that has been going well in the mornings. Any track will suit.

GORDON SETTER

An old and long established member of bird-dog aristocracy, they date back many centuries to the ancient Spanish sitting spaniels, as do most bird dogs. The Gordon is larger and heavier than the Irish or English setters and works more slowly. His color differs, too, as he is always black and tan.

Morcarine Wins Feature At 'Gansett

By the Associated Press

Pawtucket, R. I., April 18.—Sploshing mud back at her six rivals throughout the 6 furlongs, W. U. Ridenour's Morcarine scored a three-and-one-half-length victory today in the featured Woonsocket Purse at Narragansett Park.

Morcarine's 1:12 3-5 was the fastest sprint time of the card, as the 4-year-old daughter of Morvich hit the finish well ahead of Mrs. W. R. Fleming's Loveday, which had three lengths on B. M. Smith's Cooling Spring.

The Ridenour horse paid $9.30, $5.40 and $4.20. Loveday returned $9.40 and $6.80, and Cooling Spring $6.40.

Morcarine was quickest out of the gate and steadily opened up a gap on the field down the back stretch.

Court Dance was the closest to her as they entered the far turn, with Cooling Spring third and the others bunched back of these. Through the turn, Cooling Spring went to the outside of Court Dance and overtook that mare when they hit the head of the stretch.

Gold Imports Swell Total Of Idle Funds

Federal Reserve Board Puts Excess Reserves At Record 6 Billions

By the Associated Press

Large gold imports pushed idle money in American banks past $6,000,000,000 in the week ended yesterday.

Federal Reserve Board said that lendable excess reserves had increased $100,000,000 to the record total of $6,050,000,000 in the last week. The sharp increase was attributed primarily to gold imports, for which foreigners got cash to be deposited in banks.

The board's statement said:

"During the week ended April 17 member bank reserve balances increased $182,000,000. Additions to member bank reserves arose from decreases of $40,000,000 in Treasury cash and $77,000,000 in Treasury deposits with Federal reserve banks, and increases of $108,000,000 in gold stock and $14,000,000 in reserve bank credit; offset in part by increases of $27,000,000 in money in circulation and $30,000,000 in nonmember deposits and other Federal reserve accounts. Excess reserves of member banks on April 17 were estimated to be approximately $6,050,000,000, an increase of $100,000,000 for the week."

Changes in member bank reserve balances and related items during the week and the year ended April 17, 1940, were reported as follows:

Rumania Set To Destroy Oil If Invaded

By the Associated Press

New York, April 18.—Rumania was described today as ready to wreck her valuable oil wells overnight in case of invasion, repeating the strategem of the World War.

Grady T. Chupp of Columbia, Tenn., an oil expert who has conducted experimental drilling in the Balkans for the last 12 years and spent half of that time as an adviser to the oil ministry of Yugoslavia, outlined such a defense plan when he returned to this country on the S. S. Saturnia.

He said he visited Rumania last month and found the people sympathetic to the Allies, in fear of pressure from Germany and Russia, and about "99 per cent sure" they will be involved in the war.

In the last war, the Rumanians prevented use of their captured oil wells by blocking them with steel and iron scrap. It required five years to clean up the mess. If invaded again, said Chupp, the Rumanians plan to make the wells useless by pumping cement into them.

"The Rumanians say they are ready to defend their country and will be able to do it," said Chupp. "Their army has greatly improved. In the last war, their officer corps was weak, but now it is much better. The Rumanian soldier is a good, courageous fighter who only needs a proper leader."

Cotton Irregular, Prices Narrow, 3 Down to 1 Up

New York, April 18 (AP).—Cotton futures refused to follow the general price improvement characteristic of other commodity markets today and finished a session of narrow and irregular price movements 3 points lower to a point higher.

A little buying credited to Bombay accounts came into distant months in early dealings but demand tapered later. Heavy rains in Central and Eastern States give rise to fears that newly planted cotton might suffer damage but speculative buying on this theory was negligible and operators exercised caution in view of increasingly complex war news.

Cottonseed Oil

Cash interests locally reported further consumer buying of refined oil, evidently for inventory replenishment.

Crude oil in the Southeast and Valley was in good demand at 6 cents a pound. Texas crude was nominally 5¾ to 5½, depending upon location.

Heavy Selling Forces Issues Down At Close as Nervousness Is Exhibited Over Trends in Norway and Orient

New York, April 18.—The stock market was subjected to heavy selling just before the close today and lost an average of 0.37 point in trading that was featured by activity in the various war groups.

The paper issues, meat packers, aviations and sugars made up the bulk of activity and at one time or another each was given a whirl. The final whirl for all groups, however, was downward.

In some classes the selling was accepted as profit taking but another contributing factor of major importance was the spread of nervousness over developments in Norway and in the Pacific.

Total 1,205,250 Shares

Trading was active, a total of 1,205,250 shares changing hands on the big board. Before the late pressure made itself felt, there were 49 new highs established but the selloff at the close carried 44 other issues to new 1940 lows.

Passage by the House of the Walter-Logan bill was welcomed in the street where a growing number of investors and organizations feel that Federal agencies, such as the NLRB and the SEC have been carrying regulation to an extreme and have, through their interpretation of laws, interfered with recovery.

Armour, Wilson and Swift issues were trotted out when speculation faltered in the papers and several made new tops. On the whole they retained their gains better than the other groups.

Rubber Issues Break

Securities of rubber companies, especially those with foreign interests, were sold heavily. United States Rubber preferred broke 13 points to a new low and the common was off 2⅜. One sale of Goodrich preferred dropped it 4¼ and Goodyear preferred was off nearly 3.

Curtiss-Wright was the most active aviation issue, off an eighth. Lockheed, after getting near its former high, closed off nearly 2 points, and United was down 1½. Steel and Bethlehem lost 1⅛ and 1¾.

Foreign Bonds Still Sink

Foreign dollar bonds continued to slump in the listed market today, on intensification of the European war and the threat of its spread to more neutral nations. Declines of 1 to 10 points appeared in affected issues. United States Treasury bonds were soft, while domestic corporation bonds showed more losses than gains. Turnover was $6,510,000.

Chief interest in the market centered on Norwegian and Danish bonds, which were down 1 to 7 points. Best grade corporate investments reflected uncertainty about international affairs.

Grains Climb As War News Spurs Buying

By the Associated Press

Chicago, April 18.—War news brought buyers back to the grain pits today for enough wheat, corn and oats contracts to lift prices of these commodities to the highest levels since 1937.

Wheat rose as much as 2½ cents, corn was up 2 cents, oats 1 cent and rye as much as 3¼ cents. War buying was also poured into other Western Hemisphere markets, with wheat at Buenos Aires up about 2 cents higher, at Winnipeg a cent and at Kansas City and Minneapolis almost 3 cents.

Chicago wheat closed with net overnight gains of 1⅞-2¼ cents, May at $1.12-1 11⅞ and July $1.10⅜-1.10⅝. Corn was 1⅝-1⅞ higher than yesterday, May 64⅞-64¼, July 65⅛-65⅝. Oats ¾-1 higher. Rye 2¾-3 higher. Soy beans 1⅝ up and lard 15-17 higher.

Wheat prices reacted frequently during the session due to intermittent profit taking of loan grain. Receipts at the 12 principal terminals totaled 1,114,000 bushels, about 200,000 greater than a week ago and 500,000 greater than a year ago.

Oil Production May Set Record

The Alexander Hamilton Institute reported yesterday the production of petroleum during the first two months of this year amounted to 222,000,000 barrels as compared with 196,000,000 barrels in the same period last year, an increase of 13.2 per cent. The prospect is that petroleum output in 1940 will reach the highest volume on record.

If the gain in output during the remainder of the year is no greater than it was during the first two months, it seems likely that petroleum prices will remain at least firm and may possibly average somewhat higher.

Today's Radio Highlights

Jessie Ash Arndt, The Post Club Editor, discusses the problems of press relationships with members of the currently convened D. A. R.—WMAL, 10 a. m.

A Time Capsule—five grains—is buried in front of New York Winter Garden Theater where "Hellzapoppin" is the Big Town's longest run musical. Olsen and Johnson, Eddie Cantor, George Jessel and possibly Mayor LaGuardia will be on hand. This is all just a publicity stunt for New York Theater Week, a new B'way wrinkle—WMAL, 12 noon.

Dr. Walter Damrosch demonstrates the percussion instruments of the orchestra and during the latter half of his program presents dances of America—WMAL, 2 p. m.

Carmen Miranda moans into a Chicago mike: "Ze sous Umairecan Waee"—WOL, 8 p. m.

Flora Robson, the British actress who has recently achieved cinematic celebrity, brings a scene from her first American legitimate play, "Ladies in Retirement," a smash thriller-chiller—WJSV, 8 p. m.

During the past quarter-century Bert Hall has served in 14 different armies. This remarkable sidelight on our marvelous civilization is discussed by Bob Ripley, who also presents Mrs. Edith Ogilvie, the first woman to fly, and Mrs. Ada de Lauchan, author of "Liza Jane"—WJSV, 10:30 p. m.

Bidu Sayao, Hertha Glatz, Jan Kiepura, Carlo Morelli and Lorenzo Alvari sing the second act of Verdi's "Rigoletto" in St. Louis—WRC, 11:30 p. m.

Vivian Barry, who plays "Page Hazeltyne" in the C. B. S. serial, "By Kathleen Norris," tells this story on herself. While auditioning for a part in a musical comedy in the 1932-33 season, Vivian was asked to sing. A man at the piano inquired whether she was ready and she replied: "Oh, I'd rather play my own accompaniment." When she finished, he said: "You can be in my show any day." A few minutes later she was introduced to the pianist she had rejected—the late George Gershwin. Thereafter, whenever Gershwin introduced Vivian, he'd say: "This is the girl who would rather play for herself—because she can play better than I." . . . "Bird Seed Special" is the title given by Raymond Scott, famed C. B. S. composer, to his latest composition, which takes its place with "The Girl With the Light Blue Hair," "Boy Scout in Switzerland," "New Year's Eve in a Haunted House" and other of Scott's curious titles. "I was improvising at the piano," explained the C. B. S. "Concert in Rhythm" maestro, "and my canary kept chirping and getting in the way of my tune. Finally I tried to imitate the bird's own notes. So there it was, and when the number was finished, there was nothing to call it but 'Bird Seed Special.'" . . . Mandel Kramer, who uses hard language in his acting repertory in the C. B. S. "Gang Busters" dramatization, has discovered it's not the tough talk—but the gun—that persuades victims. Kramer was held up on a dark Brooklyn street recently by a mild-mannered robber who relieved him of $15. "The gunman wasn't loud," said Kramer. "He was quiet, but convincing. It was a lesson in gangster methods, but I'm not anxious for more."

From a blind fan, Wayne King received an unusual letter, written in Braille, requesting a number on his Saturday night C. B. S. program. Wayne had it translated at a library and played the request number . . . Maxine Sullivan, who appears on John Kirby's "Flow Gently Sweet Rhythm" over C.B.S., makes personal appearances in Washington, May 5.

LEAP YEAR LADY by ALMA-SIOUX SCARBERRY

SMOKY O'TOOLE pride of the neighborhood and daughter of

CLANCY O'TOOLE—retired fireman, a widower who is both father and mother to Smoky.

MRS. HETRICK—neighbor of the O'Tooles and mother of

KARL HETRICK—who was to marry Smoky after he returned from a trip West, where he received an inheritance, but instead he married

DAGNE OLSEN—another belle of the neighborhood.

TEX STACY—young cowboy actor whom Smoky meets in a theatrical booking office.

After Smoky's successful tryout for a place in the show, aided by Tex, she and Tex talked over their plans and he told her the story of his life on the plains. Then Smoky decided to herself that Tex was going to be her first husband. When she reached home that night, she saw a light at the Hetricks' and knew that Karl and Dagne had returned home. Three weeks later and just before the new show was to open on Broadway, Smoky was marketing near home when she saw Karl in the store. She avoided him, but on reaching the street he stepped out from a doorway. Again Smoky avoided him but Karl pleaded with her, trying to explain why he had married Dagne and insisted that he still loved Smoky, whereupon the little redhead told him her opinion of a two-timer and rushed home.

Chapter 11

SHAMROCK'S one deep regret was that Clancy would not be able to attend the opening of the show. She was sure his heart must be breaking because he could not sit down front and applaud the numbers in which his only child appeared, and so she said nothing to him about it. Only the tenderness of her goodby kiss conveyed to the invalid the way she felt.

Until she left the house shortly before noon, Clancy was able to keep a stiff upper lip. But when the door closed behind the little redhead he covered his deeply lined gray face with his hands and wept.

She had changed so much he hardly knew her. At times he caught flashes of the old Smoky, but usually she was either laughing a little too loudly or adding a little more lipstick to her too scarlet lips. Or entertaining the cowboy who during the month had almost become a fixture in the evening around the house.

The Opening Night

Clancy had nothing against Tex Stacy. He was well-mannered and gallant and always a perfect gentleman. But after all, they knew nothing about him. There was the fear in his heart that Smoky would fall in love with some one on the rebound and make a mistake she could never erase. That damn O'Toole pride was liable to get her into anything.

Smoky had said notning to Clancy about her meeting with Karl Hetrick. And Clancy kept from her the fact that his back pained more and more every day so that he closed his eyes and prayed for relief or death, and that only his great love for her kept him alive. He had to go on living because he was afraid to leave her alone.

The 20 Ginger Snaps all dressed in the same large dressing room and on opening night the place was a madhouse of jittery little redheads, wardrobe mistresses and interfering mothers and aunts.

Smoky's dressing spot was on the end nearest the door, and beside her sat Torchy Dover who had been in three revues and knew all the answers. The closed dress rehearsal in the afternoon had been a miserable failure, but Torchy assured Smoky that meant a good show.

Even Mr. Melvin had lost his patience and Heller, the stage director, had yelled himself hoarse at the weary cast and chorus.

Torchy helped Smoky with her make-up and when she had finished and stood back in the tiny black jet panties and brassiere that made up her opening-number costume, Torchy sighed: "Boy, have you got whoo, my friend! You got the best shape in this room."

Smoky laughed skeptically: "Oh, you're crazy."

Torchy's Advice

Torchy added another blob of beads to her own eyelashes.

"Don't tell me you don't know it. You got eyes."

Smoky laughed again.

Torchy watched her in the mirror. "You know, Smoky," she said then, "you got the most disillusioned laugh I ever heard in my life. If I didn't know this was your first show I'd say you'd been through the mill. What's eatin' you? Sometimes your eyes look so sad I could cry."

Smoky was too surprised to offer a quick denial. She opened her big blue eyes very wide. "I got a past," she said trying to be funny. "A terrible past."

"Was he a married man?" Torchy turned and look at her closely. "I suppose he was, the louse! I fell for a married man once and I almost didn't get over it for three months. But believe me, it taught me a lesson. You're not carrying a torch for that cowhand, are you, Smoky?"

Smoky pursed her lips: "Oh, I ain't a-talkin'. What's the matter with Tex?"

"He's the best-lookin' thing I've ever seen in my life," Torchy admitted judiciously. "But what future is there in getting lassoed by a cowhand?"

"Maybe he'll be a big movie star some day," Smoky smiled. "Anyway, I'm crazy about him."

"You're pixilated!" scoffed Torchy. "I could introduce you to some men with real dough. You could get places with your chassis. Don't be a sap."

"I intend to get places," Smoky assured her, airily. "In my own little way. I'm not so dumb."

She Gets an Orchid

The doorman appeared every few minutes with flowers and Smoky, being the girl nearest the door, found herself delegated to pass the boxes around. Gee Gee Maloney got a pearl necklace from her Wall Street broker and everybody gathered around and shrieked with envy.

Finally the doorman told Smoky a long box of flowers was for her, and tears came to her eyes when she opened it and saw two dozen white chrysanthemums from Clancy.

"They're from Pop," she said truthfully, and Torchy wondered why she didn't make the girls think they came from some other man.

When the doorman passed another box in for Smoky she was so curious her hands trembled opening it. It was a small square box and when she lifted the tissue Torchy, who was bending over it, whistled softly: "An orchid! And what an orchid!"

Shamrock wouldn't even have known what it was if Torchy hadn't told her. She lifted it tenderly, her eyes round with surprise.

"Oh!" she giggled happily. "Isn't it lovely."

Torchy searched the tissue frantically for a card, but there was none to be seen. "Ah!" she said with disgust. "So he won't write, eh? He must be married."

Smoky hurried to the sink for a glass of water and put the orchid in it, her curiosity burning. The Ginger Snaps were in the opening number. The callboy yelled "Overture" and the girls hurried from the room and found their way through the terrific backstage crowd to the wings.

Smoky looked for Tex, but didn't see him. In a little while she was on the stage with the Ginger Snaps, smiling and dancing, but her heart was in her mouth with fright. Again her legs felt like wood.

"Even if I can't dance as good as some of the other girls," she kept telling herself, "I've got whee. Ever'body says so and that's more important to a chorus girl than talent."

The Ginger Snaps were in five numbers, with five different changes of costume, and Smoky was coming out of the dressing room for the last number before the finale when she saw Tex

Jealous Pangs

She stopped short because Gogo Le Maire, the star of the show, was throwing her arms around him and kissing him.

"You were so marvelous, Tex," she shrieked. "Three encores! I thought they would never let us go. I'm so glad for you. Oh, you are going to be a great star. I know it. All the women are mad about you."

Finally Gogo released him and hurried to her dressing room, trailed by her colored maid.

Tex saw Smoky in her strip of orange tulle and said wryly: "I hope those straps are sewed on plenty tight. Or you'll sure to gosh catch rheumatism in your solar plexus."

She went close and touched his arm. "Do you like me this way, Tex?" She gave him the full force of her big blue eyes.

He looked down at her a little surprised. Then he assured her solemnly: "I'd like you, Smoky, if you had on red flannel underwear. Don't forget we're going out to celebrate after the show."

"Aren't you afraid?" she gave him her special wrinkle nose grin. "It's Leap Year night. I might ask you to marry me."

Tex laughed heartily. "I'll take a chance."
